

THE BELFAST RIOTS.

A Drunken Orange Mob Fight with the Police.

Men and Women Disgrace Themselves—The Troops Called Out to Preserve the Peace.

BELFAST, June 10, 1886.

Four of the rioters who were wounded by the police in yesterday's riot died today. Four others are dying. The Orangemen are making large purchases of arms and are declaring that they will have revenge upon the police for firing into their ranks.

An eye-witness of the riots on Wednesday gives the following description of the scenes attending the mob's attack on the Dowers' Hill Police Station: "Women with pebbles pried up paving stones and broke them into suitable sizes for the use of the rioters when they ran short of missiles. Women and young girls desperately entreated the men to continue fighting whenever they flagged, filling their aprons full of fresh stones, and when utterly failed the women and girls drove the men on by savage threats. The police station is a moderate sized dwelling house, and when the mob attacked the building the police responded with a volley fired from the doorway. But the rioters soon drove the officers in, and they retreated upstairs and renewed the fight by shooting from the windows on the second floor. They held their position for half an hour, during which the battle was hot and savage on both sides, when they were reinforced by the arrival of seventy fresh officers. The increased energy of the police warfare served but to aggravate the mob and they became ferocious. They were maddened by the sight of their wounded comrades, stretching and howling with agony in the streets. I have since heard old officers say that they never knew a mob show greater viciousness, violence, pluck and determination. The rioters hurled their missiles with regularity and precision, as if they had been drilled in stone-throwing. When the men in front had exhausted their ammunition they would retire to the rear to receive FRESH ARMS FROM THE WOMEN, and thus make way for their comrades with new supplies. Some of the stone-throwing was quite extraordinary. I saw a man throw a stone with such vigor that it crashed through a window, struck a rear wall, and rebounded with such force that it struck and hurt a policeman. The better armed of the rioters carried what we call here 'Belfast kidneys.' These are stones about five and a half inches long, three and a half inches wide, and weigh on an average about one and a half pounds. There were many boys among the rioters, and they were as desperate and plucky as the men. The battle at station ceased only when two hundred and fifty soldiers came to the aid of the police. The soldiers were from the Highlanders and the Fusiliers, and they soon drove the mob away."

Mr. Herbert Gladstone, speaking at Leeds lately, attributed the Belfast riots to Lord Randolph Churchill's violent speeches. The riots were not due, he said, to religious antagonism, but were deliberately planned attacks upon the police and the Executive.

POLICE GIVE WAY TO SOLDIERS. 5:30 p.m.—The out of town policemen have been withdrawn from the streets of the city in consequence of the hostility manifested towards them by the Belfast workmen, and soldiers have been told off to take the places of those retired officers and assist the city police in case they should need help tonight.

A witness belonging to a tavern adjacent to the Bowers' Hill Police Station was shot through the brain. A youth standing at the bar in a tavern opposite the station was shot. A girl named Minnie McAlister, who was out to buy a pair of shoes, was shot in the cheek. A boy named Kate was shot in the breast. A barmaid named Kelly was not shot through the skull. A strange boy was found shot dead in a house into which he had evidently run to witness the riot. The corpse when found was surrounded by a lot of gossips who were bending over it and peering into its face with the aid of a lamp. The people living in the vicinity where the rioting began say that it was caused by the police under a mistaken impression molesting and insulting some orderly workmen leaving a foundry. According to their story the populace got angry at the police, and attempted to make them desert, when a conflict became imminent. The story goes, the mob offered to behave if the police were withdrawn, but not otherwise.

THE POLICE AGAIN ATTACKED. The people at Shankhill took meeting today attacked the police. The military were summoned and the crowd dispersed. It is now stated that the meeting was summoned to denounce the police and also all other persons for attacking the houses and property of peaceable people, and the police held them in their duty to do the utmost in their power to bring the disturbers of the peace to justice, irrespective of creed or party. The meeting appointed a deputation to ask the Mayor of Belfast for the names of the officers in charge of Shankhill police barracks yesterday evening.

GALLAGHER'S FUNERAL. The funeral of Thomas Gallagher, the Orangeman who was shot and killed during the riot at Lurgan on Tuesday, took place today. The funeral procession was protected by 100 soldiers and 200 policemen. A mob of Catholics jeered the mourners and threatened to stop the hearse, but the police held them in check. The political and religious excitement is leading to dangerous quarrels among women at the factories at Lurgan. At one factory the Protestant females have struck work, demanding the dismissal of the Catholics.

RIOTING RENewed LAST NIGHT. Rioting was renewed tonight. An infuriated mob held possession of the streets, and wrecked and pillaged the taverns. The police were compelled to fire buckshot into the mob. So far as known no one is fatally injured. Many of the police were insufficiently armed. The appeals of the clergy to the rioters to disperse were futile. Eventually the troops cleared the streets.

The Belfast Riots. BELFAST, June 11.—The associated press reporter who was detailed to remain on the scene of the riots at 5 o'clock, this morning reported as follows: "I remained among the rioters all night. The greatest damage to wrecking and looting was done along Shankhill and York road. The fighting on both thoroughfares was desperate and continuous; the mob was composed of the lowest ruffians. The bayonets of the police had no effect on them, and in many cases I saw the mob, in overwhelming numbers, press up against the bayonets of the police and drive them back."

BELFAST, June 11.—The only instances in which the police drove the mob at all so far as I observed were those in which the officers in compact lines fired at close range rapid volleys of buckshot. These the rioters could not stand and they were driven back. But even under such a galling fire the rioters would drop to the pavement and rush upon the police while they were reloading. Fighting of this kind—at such close range as to be practically hand to hand—was continued until 2 o'clock this morning, when twilight began to dawn and so many of the rioters disappeared that I leave the mob insufficiently armed to longer cope with the armed police, who succeeded in dispersing it. My observation shows that the mob of last night was composed of the scum of Belfast. I saw some of them throw paving stones weighing one and two pounds. I saw some of them hurling rocks at the gallant firemen who were imperiling their lives in attempting to save the dwellings from destruction by incendiary fires, and the helpless inmates from a horrible death. If anything else were wanting to prove the character of the mob it would be furnished by dozens of ruffians I saw during the night sneaking away from wrecked or burning buildings laden down with loot. It is impossible the state of terror under which the respectable Catholic people of Belfast are now living in consequence of the prevalent anarchy. The bravest of them hardly dare venture out of doors in daylight even. I know that scores of people were shot during last night's riot. I saw ten taken to the hospitals this morning. It is feared that every funeral of the victims of the riot may provoke a fresh outbreak. The law adding citizens demand of the government the appointment of a special commission to inquire into the causes of the disorder.

Hugh C. Chalmers, home secretary, replying in the House of Commons this evening to Mr. DeGlaban, (Conservative member for Belfast), said that if the government would take steps to prosecute the police who shot down the inhabitants of Belfast during the troubles of the last few days, it is stated that the government was not informed that there had been any misconduct on the part of the police in Belfast. The secretary said the government had the fullest confidence in the constabulary, and did not intend while the present disorders continue to remove them from Belfast and substitute the military.

THREE DEATHS. BELFAST, June 11.—The rioting last night was less disastrous than on Wednesday. After their day's labor had ended, thousands of workmen gathered in the vicinity of the Bower Hill police barracks. They executed the police and cried out: "We will have ten lives for everyone of the we murdered girls." They were dispersed on the arrival of 300 infantry. Another mob on York street wrecked the wine shop of a Catholic named McKenna, McCloskey's tavern (after a stubborn fight with the police) and a number of other drinking houses. The rioting lasted till midnight when the wreckage at McCloskey's was fired. The police fought the way with buckshot when going to quench the fire. McCloskey and his family and a number of his Catholic neighbors were rescued from the fury of the mob by an Orangeman, who took them to his house and there gave them a safe refuge.

USTER UNDER MARTIAL LAW. LONDON, June 11.—The government has placed the districts terrorized by mobs in the province of Ulster under martial law.

CHAPTER II. "Malden, Mass., Feb. 1, 1880. Gentlemen—I suffered with attacks of sick headaches, Neuralgia, female trouble, for years in the most terrible and excruciating manner. No medicine or doctor could give me relief or cure until I used Hop Bitters. 'The first bottle nearly cured me.' 'The second made me as well and strong as when a child.' 'And I have been so to this day.' My husband was an invalid for twenty years with a serious 'Kidney, liver and urinary complaint.' 'Pronounced by Boston's best physicians—'Incurable!' Seven bottles of your Bitters cured him, and I know of the 'Lives of eight persons' in my neighborhood that have been saved by your Bitters. And many more are using them with great benefit. 'They almost do miracles!' I am Mrs. E. D. Slack.

Household Hints.

A lady says in Good Housekeeping: Further observation among the kitchen goods reveals an open-work basket of wire, useful for frying croquettes, fish-balls, or boiling eggs. The basket containing the prepared balls is immersed in hot fat in a kettle of suitable size, and they are evenly and quickly done. The tea and coffee balls are something new. They are made of finely woven wire, like a strainer, and have lids which fit closely. The uncooked tea or coffee is put into one of the balls, and is then steeped in the pot in the usual way, and no straining is necessary.

Among the several vegetable-mashers the favorite is made of stout wire in an upright wooden handle, the mashing part being simply the wire bent back and forth in several curves which lie horizontally, and are effective in crushing and mixing potatoes, and the like. The other basket adjusted to a certain height, just a trifle above and exactly over the chimney, and held in place by a thumb-screw. This is much harder to describe than to understand and use when seen. Water may be brought just to the boiling point in a covered tin wasper, but it will not boil, which is sometimes an advantage.

For the trifles it costs one should keep provided with a sink-cleaner—a blade of vulcanized rubber in a short handle—it does its work so noiselessly and neatly. Even in careless hands one should last several months. A small brush for cleaning vegetables may also be found at the 5-cent counter, and is well worth having.

Not among the "must haves," though useful, is a cake-cooler—a sheet of fine wire net, which is raised a little by short legs. The air has a chance to circulate about the sides of the loaf, and prevents it from becoming soggy or heavy.

For a small kitchen, a set of clothes-bars which are fastened to the wall in a group, and which may be shut up and out of the way when not in use, would be desirable. One bar or half a dozen bars, with other things, or for the various preparations of milk, it is invaluable, only one must be sure not to allow the water to boil away from the larger kettle.

The farina steam kettle must be reckoned among the indispensables. It is a double arrangement of saucers made of tin or granite ware, and sometimes of iron, in which case the inner one is porcelain lined. The granite is by far the best of all, and fully worth the difference in price, which is considerable. The boiling water is put into the outer receptacle and the food to be cooked in the inner one. For long, steady cooking, like that required for oatmeal, hominy, and many other things, or for the various preparations of milk, it is invaluable, only one must be sure not to allow the water to boil away from the larger kettle.

One thing I would urge, that is, if any one is provided with some of these labor-saving articles, that she should use them and have the good of them. It is an irritation to one who appreciates the help of such practical aids as are here enumerated to see a woman laboriously beating eggs in a heavy crock, with a large iron spoon, while the Dyer hangs idly in the pantry. The same may be said with regard to a good sewing machine, wringer, carpet-sweeper, bread-mixer, etc. Do accept the help if you can get it, and allow ingenuity and machinery to save the wear and tear of the superior human machine.

PICKLED APPLES.—Choose green, hard fruit if perfectly dry, and wash them very well. Peel, core and quarter; if large divide again. Have ready some vinegar in which ginger, allspice and a blade of mace have been boiled. Lay your apples a few at a time into your jar and pour on vinegar sufficient to cover wall, then more layers and vinegar dividing your loose spice and scattering it amongst the apples. When your vessel is full cover down close, and in three months you will have a splendid pickle. Some put the vinegar on cold and do not peel the fruit, but I prefer boiling vinegar and the rinds removed. The fruit must be perfectly dry and also kept in a dry place after pickling.
