Bitted and bridled, blinded, with aws wide gaping, he swam through a imitless sea in never ending fatuous circles. The queer furnishings he bore cared away others of his kind. onely and silent, he passed like Cain mong the fishes till starvation and heer misery ended his existence.

Cruel? Of course it was. But surey, like the verourous snake, the shark has long put himself beyond the pale of human mercy. Soft hearted as he sually is, the sailor man has a long memory. The shark has followed for for weeks in the shadow of his ship with greedy, malevolent eye. There is a heavy debt against all the shark tribe for many a lost mariner, and when the chance comes to settle old scores the sailor pays it to the full. Besides, the thing has the sanction of immemorial custom. It was some old Phoenecian, trading out of Tyre to the put the trick in practice.-Wide World Magazine.
