MARSHALL BROTHERS.

On Worthless Compliments.

By RUTH CAMERON.

When is a compliment not a compliment? Did you ever ask yourself that question? Or do you find approbation from any source so sweet that you never stop to analyze it? There are a great many people who are obligingly uncritical of others' opinions—that is, when these opinions are favorable to them. In the opposite case—well, that's quite another matter. Then they are sure to analyze the motives most carefully and to find that envy or jealousy of a mean disposition on the part of the critic is at the root of the criticism.

To return to the main road, the true value of approbation is determined by two factors: the conditions under which it is given and the judgment of the person who gives it.

A neighbor of mine was most delighted the other day because her dressmaker said that she had the best figure she had ever fitted. "And she ought to know something about figures," said my neighbor, fairly bristling with delight. So she had. That is, one factor in the approbation was entirely satisfactory, but how about the other—the conditions under which it was given? The dressmaker is new to the town and is trying to build up her trade. My neighbor is a very dressy woman whose patronage means considerable. Furthermore she has a circle of well-to-do friends. Of course one doesn't want to be invidious, but does it seem altogether impossible that the dressmaker may have had

If we would save time and work, we should follow the example of the Japanese and eliminate all useless things in the house. A profusion of things in the room detracts from the feeling of space and makes endless care and dusting necessary.

Some of the edible wild vegetables are the following: Dandelion greens, pokeweed tops, lamb's quarters, otherwise known as pigweed; the leaves and buds of the cowslip or marsh marigold, and the garden post known as purslane.

War News.

THE MIGHTY STRUGGLE.

LONDON, Aug. 19.
Complete silence is maintained as to the fortunes of war in the big fight which is understood to be in progress somewhere along the line extending through Belgium and Luxemburg. The despatches give evidence of the presence of masses of German troops pushing their way to the front behind an impenetrable screen of cavalry whose dashes in search of information as to the whereabouts of the troops of the allies have resulted in sharp clashes and heavy casualties. The Commanders of the allied forces of France, Britain and Belgium, will not permit anything about their positions to be made public, and since the official note made known the presence of a large expeditionary force on the continent, its movements have been hidden from the outside world. At Brussels, it is said, the position has not changed since yesterday, when it was reported from Brussels to be excellent for the allies. The fate of the Liege forts is not definitely known. German despatches describe them as being in the hands of the German army since the arrival of heavy artillery, while the Belgian military authorities assert that they are still intact and holding out bravely. In Alsace Lorraine, the French turning movement through Southern Alsace appears from French reports to be progressing favorably for the French. This seems to receive confirmation in the despatch sent out by the Wolff Bureau, the German official news agency, saying that two batteries of guns were captured by the French who continued their forward march. All these reports, however, refer to preliminary meetings of opposing bodies of troops leading up to the great battle which may already have begun. Even leading Frenchmen take occasion to point out to their countrymen that the decisive conflict is yet to come, and that too much reliance is not to be placed on reports of demoralization among the German troops. On the sea it is reported that a naval encounter on the North Sea has occurred, but this is without official confirmation. On the Russo-German-Austria frontier, fights of small importance are recorded.

"FEAR GOD! HONOR THE KING!"

LONDON, Aug. 20.
Kitchener's soldierly homily to the men of the British Expeditionary force, which directed every soldier to keep his active service pay book is as follows: "You are ordered abroad soldiers of the King to help our French comrades against the invasion of the common enemy. You have to perform a task which will need your courage, your energy and your patience. Remember the honor of the British Army depends on your individual conduct. It will be your duty not only to set example in discipline and perfect steadiness under fire, but also to maintain most friendly relations with those whom you are helping in this struggle. The operations in which you will be engaged will, for the most part, take place in a friendly country, and you can do your own country no better service than by showing yourself to France and Belgium in the true character of the British soldier, by being invariably courteous and considerate and by never doing anything likely to injure or destroy property. Always look upon rioting as a disgraceful act. You are sure to meet with a welcome and be trusted. Your conduct must be such as to keep your health sound, so keep constantly on your guard against excesses. In this new experience you may find the temptation of both wine and women. You must entirely resist both temptations; and while treating all women with perfect courtesy you should avoid any intimacy. Do your duty bravely; Fear God and Honor the King!"

AUSTRIANS REPULSED.

LONDON, Aug. 19.
A St. Petersburg correspondent tells of the repulse of Austrian attacks on the town of Vladimir Vyolask, north of Lemberg, on the Austrian frontier, with heavy Austrian casualties.

ALLEGED GERMAN VICTORY.

LONDON, Aug. 19.
A despatch received by the Wireless Press Bureau from Berlin, says that an encounter took place at Staltpothen, in East Prussia, on August 17th, when a division of the German first Army Corps defeated a Russian force, capturing 1,000 prisoners and six machine guns. Many Russian guns which could not be taken by the

BRUSSELS STILL.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 19.
It is officially announced here that the position of the Belgian army continues excellent, and there is no chance of any incursion toward Brussels. No Germans are now reported in or around Landen. The German cavalry camps are in the Gembloux region, north of Namur, but there is no movement of troops in that district.

FORMING A MERCANTILE FLEET.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.
President Wilson to-day approved the plan to have the Government buy a number of ships to be used in taking American foodstuffs abroad. It was tentatively agreed that an appropriation of $25,000,000 would be asked of Congress for the purchase of ships.

Shot His Friend In a Nightmare.

Extraordinary Case Reported From Ireland.

How a sleepy passenger in a motor car made a midnight road smash more exciting by defending himself with a revolver against fancied highwaymen, was related to County Westmeath magistrates at Mullingar recently, by Daniel Flood, a local justice of the peace.

Mr. Flood, J.P., is also an auctioneer, and recently held an auction on the land of a friend and client, Mr. Henry Bole. When the auction, at Colehill, County Longford, was over, he undertook to drive Mr. Bole in a motor car towards Mullingar. Apparently his passenger client went to sleep during the drive.

Just about midnight, when all had gone well to within seven miles of Mullingar, the car collided at a bend in the road with a motor cycle and side car. It was not a bad smash, and Patrick Halligan, the cyclist, called in two passing cyclists to help in putting things right. All were working about the car, and restarting the engine, when Mr. Bole woke up.

"Hands up, or I fire!" Bole cried, from the darkness. Mr. Flood stepped up to reassure his friend, but Bole pulled the trigger of a revolver, and a shot struck Flood in the arm.

"What are you shooting for?" cried the auctioneer. "Shoot straight, if you want to shoot!"

The sleepy passenger did not recognize his friend, and, murmuring, as though in a nightmare, "You are a brave man," held the revolver levelled as though to shoot again.

"Then I charged him," related Mr. Flood. "I charged up into the car and got hold of his pistol arm, but the revolver went off and a bullet struck me in the right thigh."

When the helping cyclists had time to jump to the auctioneer's aid again in this new development of the accident, Mr. Bole became thoroughly, if rudely awakened. The friend he had shot was carried to a farm near by, and a constable finally arrested Mr. Bole, who was now charged with wounding.

Police Sergeant Scott said he found Mr. Flood wounded in the house of a farmer. Bole was lying unconscious by the side of the road with a cut on the head. When he recovered later and was cautioned, he said, "Could it be possible?"

The case was adjourned, and Mr.

Bole admitted to bail.—Lloyd's News, London.

Household Notes

A strong solution of borax and hot water poured down the sinks and drains will rid them of any offensive odor.

There is no economy in buying small pieces of ice. Know the size of your ice box and buy a piece to fill it.

Do not clean shoes too often. Sometimes they only require rubbing up. Do this with a pad made of old velvet.

Acid fruits should never be prepared with a steel knife. The best preparing tools are nickel or silver knives.

When making hot starch always use scapy water, as it gives the necessary shine to linens, and the irons will not stick.

From the button side of a waist in a folded bath towel, buttons turned downward. It will prevent them from breaking.

Kerosene will do the work of any of the cleaners placed on the market and is much less expensive. It is excellent for cleaning the tub and tiles in the bathroom and equally good for the oiled floors.

Stomachs Kept Doctor Busy

"An old-fashioned doctor, a number of years ago, told us stomachs kept him busy. And he argued that a more conscientious care of the stomach would practically put his profession out of commission."—National Food Journal, June, 1914.

It was a new process of milling that had considerable to do with keeping this old doctor on the jump. This process—which made flour look white and pretty—unfortunately removed nearly all of the really vital mineral elements of the wheat—the invaluable phosphate of potash, etc.

This kind of milling has now become almost universal. Think what it means to deprive the system of these elements which are necessary for its daily rebuilding?

Grape-Nuts

—a delicious food

made of wheat and barley, contains all the nutriment of the grains, including their mineral elements. Many forms of stomach trouble are due to a lack of these elements in daily food; and a regular ration of Grape-Nuts and cream along with other food is admirable to set one right.
