

ANNABEL

THE TEMPTATION.

CHAPTER XXXVIII. A TERRIBLE SCENE—PHILIP AND JIM AT THE OLD HOUSE AT DUDDEN.

"I have thought of that, Jim, and mean to be very careful in my procedure. But, oh, you cannot wonder if my excitement is uncontrollable. Think what I have suffered—think how I have grieved for my darling as dead and gone, and now to have her restored to me as from the grave. Oh, Jim, my whole being is unbridled; it is like a wild unimagined dream, which sometimes I fear will end in an awakening to the former woe."

"Don't wonder a bit at your feeling just like that," responded Jim. "It wouldn't be in nature, least ways not in your nature, sir, if it were any other way, and that's the very reason I have ventured to warn you."

"Here be Dudden, now," said the ostler, looking back from his seat in front. "Ha! where?" cried Philip, bounding up and looking eagerly forward.

"Yonder, sir. Do you see among the wood a patch of trees standing by themselves?" "I do—I do—"

"Well, sir, the old house be among them trees, and a mortal out-o'-the-way place it be, too."

"Solitary, indeed," ejaculated Philip, casting a swift glance at the long, dark mass of wood on the one hand and the wide back moor on the other, but instantly bringing his gaze back to the isolated clump of trees, which had for him an all-absorbing fascination, for within their encircling shadow was Annabel imprisoned. This, then, had been the dreary scene of her long suffering and anguish. In this deserted solitude she had mourned and wailed in her hopeless misery, till perchance despair had settled down on her young soul, and in utter apathy she had ceased to look or pray for deliverance.

It being winter, and the trees stripped of their leaves, the dark outline of the rambling old house could be discerned while they were yet some distance away; and as they drew still nearer, and passed slowly and silently over the grass-grown track between the line of trees, its grim desolation was more and more realized.

From none of its many windows did a light beam, and nothing could be seen or heard to indicate that any human being was within its walls. Their approach was made with as little noise as possible, their purpose being to give no warning to the woman within, who in Dick's absence had charge of the captive.

They drew up close to the gate in the high wall which surrounded the courtyard, and there awaited. The ostler was directed to turn the horse's head, and have all things ready to depart when they came back from the interior with it, it was to be hoped, the rescued Annabel. Philip and Jim then cautiously drew near to the large gate, and the latter drew forth the key which he had taken from Dick's pocket. It turned out, however, that it was not needed at this point of the proceedings, for the door had no lock upon it. It had strong bolts for fastening on the inside, but these were now drawn, the door being secured by nothing more formidable than a latch, which only required to be lifted to give them entrance.

Iron in the Blood

MAKES THE WEAK STRONG.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damage, and wasting, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhoea, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low state of the system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures, to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass. Pamphlets Free.

J. P. DINSMORE, Proprietor, No. 63 Day St., New York. Sold by Druggists generally.
