Resentment Against Landowners.

Nevertheless, the workingmen are less incensed against the peasant and owners, although under present conditions both these latter have to face far greater difficulties. Wages are so high that factories are run at a loss or at minimum profit, and the same applies to large landed estates. Many people affirm that a modified Boishevism already exists in Poland. On the other hand, profiteers, who speculate on low exchange value, run rife. A quite new race of people has arisen in Warssaw, giving an unwonted and strange physiognomy to the town. So unsympathetic is the tone of Poland capital that many of the form of the form of the first the town and reflected in the first the town and reconnected and the dominimal profit in the same as the pressure on the members of the fine the form of the first the town and consecutions instead of being a first that the first the form of the form of the first the form of the first profit of the first the form of the first profit of the saw of the first profit of th

Conference of Large Proportions.

That the negotiations have been difficult, and it would really seem that the accord, which has been finally realized, is based rather on a reciprocal neutralization than on a mutual collaboration.

That the prime minister has some such move in view is believed by some of his friends here. Seeing that a limited conference nearly led to a dead-lock, he hopes, they say, to arrive at a settlement by making the conference the people.

The real source of the high prices at present prevailing lies to a large extent with the agriculturists, the peasant no less than the landowners. Mr. Witos, himself a peasant and the representative of the peasant party, is accused of favoring his class, who have grown rich at the expense of the community. The peasant pags very few taxes and takes enormous profits; moreover, instead of letting his capital circulate, he stores up his money, and, having few wants, does not contribute to the increase of trade.
