

The Taxation Question

liberally with regard to others. In reply to Mr. Ker, witness said his objections were taken rather to the form of the act than to its substance.

Mr. Cotton: Then as I understand it the government can devise some other way of doubling the taxation that would not be so much a grievance with you as the mere fact of its being inequitable in its form.

Mr. Oliver said he would not commit himself to any such statement as that. Mr. C. Fisher, assessor for the New Westminster district, said there had been only four or five appeals from the personal property assessment in the whole district. The act has given very general satisfaction. In the administration of the act common sense, equity and discretion were used.

Mr. Oliver wanted to know if Mr. Fisher meant that he was called upon to supply the deficiencies in the act. Mr. Fisher admitted that his clerk, Mr. Major, had asked Mr. Oliver certain questions as to his growing crop, but this was done in connection with his duties, and the matter had been explained to Mr. Major by him.

Mr. Oliver contended that this discriminated unfairly against the farmer. In explanation of this, Mr. Fisher explained that Mr. Major was a junior clerk and did not comprehend the true nature of his office. In this case he had exceeded the authorization of the act, and this Mr. Fisher had explained to him.

Mr. Oliver argued that the act was unworkable. It was impossible to assess a large part of the produce of the farm, under its provisions, for instance, small fruits, such as strawberries, were often picked, marketed and eaten in the course of a few days. Then the assessor on general produce could not be levied with anything like just equilibrium.

Mr. Cotton: What is the difference between the farmer and his produce and a merchant with goods in store. Mr. Oliver: He is not assessed on what he has made out of his goods.

Mr. Cotton: There are special considerations in the case of the farmer. The farmer is given an exemption on all produce necessary for the sustenance of himself and his family.

Mr. Oliver: So he is. The point I make is that the farmer's products are his income. Mr. Cotton: It is the same way with the manufacturer's products. I think Mr. Oliver: The manufacturer's products are not assessed as personal property as the farmer's are.

Mr. Cotton: It is the same way with the manufacturer's products. I think Mr. Oliver: The manufacturer's products are not assessed as personal property as the farmer's are.

Storm King Supreme

Entire Atlantic Coast in Grasp of One of the Fiercest Blizzards. Many Deaths in New England and Suffering is Intense. Extended as Far South as Florida and Orange Crop Suffers.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—New York tonight is recovering from the effects of yesterday's storm, which so effectively put a stop to traffic and tied up some lines of business. Although the thermometer registers zero this morning, 15,000 men were sent out to remove the snow from the thoroughfares, and many avenues of travel are now open. Over 250 snow shovellers were engaged to clear the sidewalks, and street for frostbites, and scores of others were attended at uptown stations. Montreal, Quebec, and other cities in the north are suffering from the blizzard, and little business was transacted during the day and all places of amusement were closed.

Over five hundred men and women spent last night in the passenger station in New York. The station was crowded with people who were unable to get home. Many others were compelled to remain in deep drifts on the roads around New York. The embargo on shipping was lifted with the advent of clear weather, and the large number of vessels which reached port ice-covered. All report tempestuous voyages and much suffering among the crews. The steamer Lighter Clarence, which left Bayonne, N. J., for Brooklyn yesterday with seven men aboard, has not been heard from since. The wreck was reported by a passing vessel and it is feared it is lying on the rocks. The mail from various points on the coast coast indicated that the great storm of yesterday had lost its severity during the night. Reports from England today from various points on the coast coast indicated that the great storm of yesterday had lost its severity during the night.

One of the most serious conditions of the epidemic is the fact that the food and fuel supply. Already there is practically a famine in milk. Recovered from the storm, many of the supply districts have arrived yesterday had not put in an appearance. The big milk contracting companies that they were not expected before late today. The recovery of the surface lines was very slow and underground and elevated roads were seriously affected. In Brooklyn the situation was worse than in New York. Lines no cars at all were running during the usual rush hours and thousands were left waiting for hours. The situation in New York was worse than in New York.
