To-day is the anniversary of Ireland, and as a general thing there will be little parading done in Canada. In abandoning street displays Irishmen in this country are setting a good example. If the sight that greets them to-day in turning their eyes toward the old sod is marred by the unhappy condition of Ireland, they can at ast look with satisfaction on their future in this Canada of ours. But it is as Cana dians not as Irishmen that they will best appreciate the future of this new nationality that we flatter ourselves Canadians are building up on the North American conti-

we are glad to see that some action has been taken in reference to the railway crossings on Queen street, and we hope that this agitation will not end untill every railway crossing in the city has some safeguard for preventing people crossing when trains are near, and thus save a repetition of the sad accidents which have so recently occurred at both the King and Queen street crossings. We strongly approve of the suggestions made by a deputation who recently waited on the license commissioners, that they made by a deputation who recently waited on the license commissioners, that they should publish the names of those asking for licenses, and would add that it should be done continuously for at least one week before the granting of the licenses. Your honor in your address spoke of the number of tavern Your honor in opening in almost every part of the city, sometimes in places where the neighbors to sometimes in places where the heighbors to a large extent were opposed to them. We feel we cannot express our disappropriation on this point too strongly, knowing as we do the terrible effects of strong drink.

We think were the license commissioners to adopt a different plan and issue two classes of licenses one at a certain price, where all kinds of liquor might be sold, the other at a reduced price, where only such as beer, both lager and ordinary ale, could be sold, then they would be doing away with the temptation, to a very large extent of using strong liquor, and thus perhaps save a good many from crime.

The Mercer there a large number of women, all husy at their different tasks. What we would call particular attention to is the children's department. Here, under the vagrancy act, little girls up to 16 years of age are sent. They are under the supervision and care of a kind matron and teachers, and are taught not to look upon this as a prison, but as a home, where they can learn to read and write as well as other necessary things to fit them to be some useful members of mises, a resolution of encouragement was reciefy. The children are often sent unanimously passed by the jury. messages outside of the prison walls, and show no disposition to run away. This speaks well for the management of the institution. Everything is clean and well ordered. The lunatic asylum was next visited. This we found more than full; under the admirable care and attention of Dr. Clark and his assistants all seemed as happy as could be expected. The jail is clean and well kept, but we think work of clean and well kept, but we think work of some kind ought to be found for the prisoners, and would suggest that the land in connection with the jail should be properly farmed and made to yield a revenue instead of lying idle as it is at present. If no work can be found, then the cells should be different, and the prisoners kept separate and not be allowed to mixed together as at present, where one bad prisoner is sure to effect those who have not at the Grand opera house in Betsy Baker. cells should be different, and the prisoners kept separate and not be allowed to mixed together as at present, where one bad prisoner is sure to effect those who have not fallen to his own level. The prisoners' complaints were, not enough to cat, poor at that, and nothing to do. As to the first, the food is good and the quantity plenty.
