

THE BURGVILLE BOYCOTT.

THE BEGINNING AND ENDING OF A FUNNY MINISTERIAL STRIKE.

How the Reverend T. DeWitt Jenkins was turned over the coals by the Parishioners—Nothing to Equal It Since '73.

Sunday dawned bright and clear in the little village of Burgville. The honest, hardy villagers, accustomed to early rising work days, believed they were entitled to a little rest on Sunday, and they took it. But they were not slothful, and at an hour that would have been deemed unreasonable early in other towns, they began to assemble in the village square. Did you ever see a village wake up on Sunday morning? Well, neither did I, so let that pass.

But Burgville did wake up this Sunday, and Burgville went to church. Little did this quiet hamlet realize the exciting scene that was in store for it this peaceful Sabbath. Little did it think that the night of a struggle would be commenced within its sleepy domain that would decide one of the greatest questions of the age. It waited its way silently to its pews, and at half-past ten o'clock it was again, patiently awaiting the commencement of devotional exercises.

Time flew by, but the pastor appeared not. Quarter to 11, 11 o'clock, quarter past 11, and still the Reverend T. DeWitt Jenkins had not made known his presence. Burgville looked impatiently at the various watches and began to have misgivings. Perhaps the pastor was ill.

At half-past 11 Burgville could wait in suspense no longer, so G. Jonathan Gibbs, John Brown and Xerxes Smith were appointed a committee to wait upon the reverend gentleman and learn the cause of his detention.

Slowly they wound their way to the parson's little brown frame house at the end of the street, discussing meanwhile the probable result of their errand. Arrived at their destination they were surprised to see the parson seated on his little side veranda, smoking a corn-cob pipe, with his feet elevated on the railing in front of him. "What could be the meaning of it?"

"Sir," said Mr. G. Jonathan Gibbs, the spokesman, very respectfully, "we were requested by the citizens of Burgville to inquire of you why you are absent from your pulpit this morning."

"Quite right," said the Rev. T. DeWitt Jenkins approvingly. "Quite right! The citizens have a right to know. Gentlemen, I am on a strike."

The committee was thunderstruck. "Yes," continued the Rev. Jenkins, as he took a puff from his pipe, "I am on a strike. Tell the citizens that I consider my salary of $200 per annum insufficient, and that I shall refuse to work until it is raised. If necessary I shall resort to the boycott and refuse to marry or baptize your sons and daughters."

The committee returned to the church and reported these words. The excitement created by the announcement was something tremendous. Old Haskelh Tompkins said he had seen nothing to equal it since Deacon Stone's wood-burned burning down in '87. John Brown, Xerxes Smith, Stephen Stubbins and Mrs. Abijah Homespun all tried to speak at once, and the effect was indescribably bewildering.

That afternoon a mass meeting was held in the school house. Xerxes Smith was in the chair, and, in calling the meeting to order, he spoke as follows:

"Fellow Ladies and Gentlemen: We have met this afternoon to decide a matter of great importance. The question is: Shall we permit the rights of the fair-minded citizen to be trodden under foot by the holy hand of 'Truth'?"

"Of course, no, never!"

"No," continued Mr. Smith eloquently, "we shall not. Let us here and now raise our strong right arms in solemn exhortation against this unchristian usurpation."

At this juncture Anna Maria Stubbins raised her green gingham umbrella above the heads of the crowd, and cried shrilly: "Cheer! my sentiments! Down with strikes, ay, ay!"

The result of the conference was that Burgville decided not to yield to the Reverend T. DeWitt Jenkins' demand, but to import a rival pastor from the neighboring hamlet of Fagtown. Accordingly G. Jonathan Gibbs and Xerxes Smith were dispatched to secure the services of the Reverend Henry Ward Drandler and to bring him to Burgville in time for evening service.

Now, this plan might have worked very well had not the Reverend T. DeWitt Jenkins learned of his enemies' projected move, and immediately made up his mind to thwart it. He left his house late in the afternoon and strolled leisurely along the road that led to Fagtown. Burgville was instantly on the qui vive. What did he intend to do? "Some mischief surely," Burgville thought, and so followed him, although at a respectful distance.

Presently the cart containing the Reverend Henry Ward Drandler and the committee was seen approaching. T. DeWitt Jenkins peered and Mrs. Abijah Homespun stepped up to him.

"TRUTH"
