SPIRITUAL WORSHIP WITH A. CARNAL INSTRUMENT.

The Apostle while contrasting the Jewish and too Christian altar, Heb. 13, contrasts also Jawish and Christian praise. For if not, why does he so emphatically enjoin the praise of the heart and hips alone; and limit it to them; evidently in opposition to the maise of instrumouts, which have neither heart nor lips, excluding all Levitical Inspuments from Christian praise, as well as all Levitical victors from the Christian Altar. We see here vocal praise enjoined, but fail to see Instrumental praise even permitted; whereas, we might suppose it Instrumental praise be Scriptural, it would be aimetive too. In Eph. 5, 19, the original is a Adontes has prellentes on te hardin humon to kario. Now if any difference should be made in the translation of these We see here vocal praise enjoined, Greek participles, that difference must be made in the music and not in the Instru-ment, for both participles refer to the same instrument-kardia, the heart of the wor-shipper, and kardia is in the Dative of Instrument by the Rules of Greek Grammar, and whether we translate psalloutes psallning, harving, singing, or playing, the Instrument is the same—the kardta of the wershipper, and nothing elso and both participles are equally connected with it, and reter to it as the only given and prescribed instrument. Nor can it be proved by sound criticism from New Testament development that adontes refers to vocal music, and psattontes to Instrumental Music, as the pro-organists maintain; more than it can be proved, that delseis -- prayer, refers to vocal prayer, and hiketerna—supplication, refers to instrumental prayer, nor that these Greek participles refer to different instruients-the one natural, and the other artificial, more than it can be proved, that prayer and supplication in Hob. 5.
7. refer to different individuals, or that the one refers to animate and the other to inanimate objects. And judging from the practice of the Apos-tics and primitive church which must have understood the scriptures better than we, a would appear as probable that David in 150th Psalm, meant the organ of nature in the christian church, as that he, in 40th, meant the meantation of Jesus, or that he in 41st meant Judas, the traiter, and if it is arged that David in the spirit dictated to the christian church the use of artistic instruments in divine worship, it must be naturnents in divino worship, it must be admitted, that the apostles in their time, and also the primitive church, violated that precept for the first 670 years, which is incredible. But if so be, that the inspired penman intended by the vorb psallo, in this connection to teach the church the adoption of an instrumentias an accom-paniment to vood psalmody during diving worship, it must be one of divine mechanism -the heart of the worshipper, for without it no worship is acceptable to Jehoyah, and worship, Judges 4., 24. the only worship which the apostle teaches, and which he always enjoins. Nor can we for a moment suppose, that the apostle taught the church the adoption of an instrument not essential to spiritual worship while inculcating that duty, or that the Derty could be spiritually worshipped by the aid of human mechanism. in the New Testament there is not a single text which favors mechanical worship. God domands spiritual worship, other worship is mere mockery, but to render spiritual worship with a carnel instrument, which is the substance of the organ question, is impossible. The Psalins are the only portion of the Bible that was male for praise, and the lips accompanied with the leart and understanding of the worship-per are the only instruments authorized by the New Testament, and the W.M. Confession of Paith for singing them.

That the voice should be accompanied with an instrument no Bible reader can candidly deny, and that the apostle taught that, is evident, but his language combined with his practice, proves that it is an in-strument whose mechanism is divine. Then the Question is not as to the use of an instrument, but as to the nature of the instrument to be used, whother one of human or divine mechanism should form the model of our practice, as an aid to singing. Instrumental aid should be used in a preparatory institution, not in the church than human authority for concluding that psatio is not to be understood artistically in this connection. For our model the Lord fesus was his disciples, while praising God Math. 26-30, Mar. 14-26 used the verb distinct of the matter of the interpretation of the matter profession. Out of a thousand never pleaded: Paul and Silus used the same merchants two-thirds fail, and reach the werh Hummountpm Theon Acts 16-25. But what is conclusive is the fact, that the apostle while quoting the words of David anent Christian praise, in the Christian: Church uses the same verb. "In the might of the church Humness Sc "I will praise Thee" Heb. 2-12. Now let it be observed that it is the Son who is here addressing the Cather whose praise he promises to sing in the midst of the church, that is in pit-bite worship, and let it also be observed, with what instruments He did sing his praise as the tist supper, the institution of the Christian church, and how scrupulously his inspired agents adhered to his example. In Ro. 15th the apostle quotes the Son as promising the father to praise him among sonally among the Gentiles, the braise there spoken of mist refer to the praise of the church, the veril paulto is the lone used to come then be pleaded. Now let the render carendar period. Paul's instruction to a Gentle church I. Cor. 14-15 in reference to the instruments and made of praise, and he carme full history hold W. Tatll Light it a 'good work.' The come of a service south plen of our opponents in this cerb, and the sense in which the apostle of the Contilos understand and listed it.

The ollow verbarish if the treek Testament for praising God by angels and men is aineo both in its simple and compound form. Ro. xv. 11, for which artistic connection is never pleaded, and with which the Head of the Church commands all nations and people to praise lim. "Aincite ton kupion, punta ta ethna." Add to this that. Ishiah 52, 8, while sponking of Christian praise designates it vocal and congregational, and that the praise of the 3,000 converts while under the inspiration of the Apostle, and while also under the influence of the Holy Glost on the day of Penticost is ex-ipressed by the verb ainco, the original is aincountes ton Theon, Acts 2, 17, and that it is stated vorce 12 to be the decrease of the

Now, since no exposition of any portion Asw, since no exposition or any portion of Scripture can be just or temble which contradicts what is elsewhere plainly taught, and as it has been proved that Christ and his Apostles used Humineo and aineo frequantly to praise God, and that the prediction expressed by psallo. Ps. 117, Ro. 15-11 was verified without any artistic accompani-ment—and that that mode of praise was ment—and that that more or praise was declared by the Spirit to be the doctrine of the Apostles, it must appear evident to every unprejudiced reader that the proposed parameter view of psallo is unfounded. W. organistic view of psallo is unfounded.

THE CHEERFUL GIVER.

I was lately reading of a little boy who was trying to be like God by being a giver. He loved to give. He would go to his father sometimes half a dozen times in a day. with his bright eyes sparkling, and his little round face all in a glow, and say:

"Pa, I want a penny to give to a poor beggar at the door," or "to the organ-gran-der," or " to the little girl that wants cold victuals."

And then, on Sunday mornings he would come and ask for something for the Sunday School Missionary Society, and for many other things. His father wanted him to form the habit of giving while he wasyoung, and so he always let him have what he wanted for these objects.

But one day when he came to ask for something his father said to him:

"My son, don't you think you give away a great deal of money?

"Why, yes, pa," said he, " and I do lovo to-give it."

"But then you come to me for all you give. It is not your own money that you are so liberal with."

This seemed a new thought to the little fellow, and he turned away to his play, per-plexed a little by what his father had said to him. Presently, however, he came running back.

"Pa," he asked, "Who gives you the money that you gives away?"

"I carn it by hard labor, my son."

" But who gives you the strength to labor with, pa?" asked the little fellow. " God gives us our strength," said his father. "And, pa, haven't you often told me that God gives us every thing?" "Yes every good thing we have God

"Well, pa, I love to givenway the money you give me; don't you love to give away the money God gives you?"

The father hugged the little prattler in

THE MINISTRY AS A PROFESSION.

Afface has been much said, of late years, in regard to the trials and self-denials of the ministry, and to the reductance of young men to enter this profession because of the crosses which are to be horse, and the poverty which is to be endured. Undoubtedly there are derods "in every "lot," and in some ministerial lots a good collection of them, but it is well sometimes to look at the whole matter from the other side, and to There has been much said, of late years, in regard to the triads and self-denials of the ministry, and to the p-inctance of young men to enter this profession because of the crosses which are to be house, and the poverty which is to be endured. Undoubted by there are "terooks" in every slot, "and in some namisterial lots a good collection of the whole matter from the other side, and to see whether there are not attractions in the halmstry apart from those which consist in the halmstry apart from those which consist in the halmstry apart from those which consist in the satisfaction of serving Christ and doing good to men. A writer in the New York Transmer some time ago give this speech of ministerial hie in a way which is striking. Refering to a vein rable clergy man who retired at the age of seventy, with a sulary of $3,000 for the raminder of his life, he said:

Out of a thousand merchants two-thirds fail, and reach the close of life destitute. Out of a thousand Jawyers, and a thousand doctors, not a third live by their profession. The average of ministers would not have more than average success if in Lusiness. Spurgeon, Tyng Beccher, Murray, and men who command great salaries, are mon of groat talent and ability who would have made their mark any where. The Stewarts, Ponbodys, Websters, Choates, Vanderbilts, appear only once in a century. The common mass by countless thousands, toil on for a bare subsistence. There is no class of men bet-tor paid, as a whole, than ministers. They tor paid, as a whole, than ministers. They live on an equality with the average of their nepple in all parts of the country. No matter how laundle or how obsence a minister's originarity by holes admitted to the hest accept in the land. The doctor lawyer, and merchant toil y ars for a position which is necorded at once to as young minister. With his first so rmon the doors of all mansions are through open to him. As a mere business the ministry is worth looking it, in what it offers—the position into which it introduces mont and the fact that though the past is not large to the pastor, broad is given, and his, water is sure. St., Paul calls it a good work.
