

ly as compared with another and that the rich support those who are not so rich. Only then can we move toward a national policy. An attempt should be made to lessen the emphasis placed on mineral extraction and lay greater emphasis on employment-producing jobs in the manufacturing industry. To provinces which are heavily dependent on resource industries we could offer a new transportation policy which would enable them to get more industry than before. To the extent that revenues of a province declined as a result in change in national policy, lost revenues would be made up by revenues from provinces whose position had improved.

The minister is a new minister. He is a young man trying to get ahead. He is trying to make prime minister. I hope he succeeds. He is somewhat more polite than the present one. He might just break the jinx. This is the new minister's opportunity to make a hero of himself and find some bold and imaginative approach to problems which have been largely ignored by his predecessors. We, on this side, wish him well and are offering him able advice as to what he should do, and we hope he accepts it.

Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements

[Translation]

Mr. C.-A. Gauthier (Roberval): Mr. Speaker, since the former speaker has left me only four minutes, might I declare that it is six o'clock so that I may continue my remarks tomorrow?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Laniel): Does the House agree that it is six o'clock?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Laniel): It being six o'clock, the House stands adjourned until tomorrow afternoon at 2 p.m.

At 5.56 p.m. the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.