

ALASKA

try. Here you find a large frontier town, the houses all built of logs, and while they have no pretensions of beauty, they are warm and comfortable. Circle City has a population of nearly two thousand people, and some of the best placer mines in the country are located near this place, and prospects are that this will be one of the best placer mining camps on the American continent, as it is steadily increasing in population, and the miners and prospectors are continually finding new and richer placer ground, and as the country around here has been comparatively little prospected, we look for a big increase in population and the amount of gold taken out of this section.

From here you proceed on up the river for two hundred and forty miles further, where you find Fort Cudahy at the mouth of the celebrated Forty-mile Creek. Here is a thriving town, very similar to Circle City, but not as large. This is the supply point for the mines in the Forty-mile district. This district has been a very prosperous one for the last four years and has turned out a great quantity of gold, this being the first important district where coarse gold was discovered. The Yukon is navigable for some distance above this point, but at present steamers do not run above here.
