Verdict re railway fatality—Practical Recommendations of the Jury.

"Accidental death" was the verdict rendered by Coroner Atkins' jury in the case of Thomas Notley, who was killed in a railway accident in King-street subway last Wednesday. To their verdict the jury added a recommendation that a code of signals between motormen and conductors, whereby on trucks in emergencies, and that a rule be made that on all occasions cars stop at each entrance to the subway.

The principal evidence yesterday was that of Matthew Chillum, which was taken from him as he lay in his cot at the hospital. He said that he was driving with a load of earth through the subway, and when a little east of the roadway leading to the Notley Company's premises, the double-track broke. Notley was on the load and witness and when the double-track broke, we got off the load and saw a trolley car at the top of the incline. WE KNOW

We know all about the clothing we sell. Nothing is "skimped." The linings are just as carefully watched as the cloth itself. Inside and outside are both reliable. We don't sell the best garments just for the sake of saying they are the best. We sell them because well-made clothing wears better and looks better. It satisfies, and that's what our proposition is—satisfaction or your money back.
