The detectives are looking for a young twoman who left a baby at the residence of Mrs. J. Patterson, York-street, near the high level bridge.

About 300 pounds of brass were stolen from the sailety at the Castle, to loan the society collections to the city to make the nucleus of a museum. The Mayor favored the proposal, and said it would make a fit subject for the Park Commission's consideration.

not the leaders of their party had not disappointed them, and closed by warmly endorsing Mr. Lancaster, the Conservative candidate for the riding.

Dr. Lancaster Came Next.

E. A. Lancaster, M.D., in a short and telling address, declared that he intended to conduct his campaign in a way that at any rate would bring no discredat upon himself as a candidate or upon the county. He would discuss the public questions fairly, and would be quite willing to abide by the verdict of an intelligent electorate. His platform would be support of the National Policy. He would stand for British connection first, last and all the time, and would support-all measures calculated to cement the bonds of the Empire and place Canada in her true position as one of the most important parts of that Empire. Leaving national matters, he dealt some telling blows to the present representative, Mr. Gibson, for his neglect of the local interests of the county. He received an ovation, both on rising and taking his seat.

The corner's jury this evening continued an inquiry in the case of William Cliffe's Death.

The corner's jury this evening continued an inquiry in the case of William Cliffe, who died under somewhat suspicious directimatances on Sunday night. After three witnesses had been examined, including the widow, some of the jurors wanted to know why the County Crown Attorney was not present to examine the witnesses, and protested against a continuance of the luquiry without him. The prosecuting attorney was telephoned for and he arrived a few minutes before 10 o'clock,

Mrs. Cliffe was then recalled. She testified that her husband was brought home about 4 o'clock on Saturday morning, and was very sick, vomiting. A doctor was summoned. Dr. Cockburn arrived about 10 and treated him and returned again in the communication with it?

History Condemns Liberals, Again history condemned the Liberals, and therefore they disliked history. The Conservative party in 1878, seeing that it was not possible that the country could be great and prosperous without varied industries, introduced the National Policy. Again the Liberals opposed, and again the verdict of history condemns the country for the country. Mr. Foster guoted speeches of Sir Wilfrid Laurier before 1896, demonstrating that he promised to destroy, pretection, and said that it was because such history condemned the Liberal party's present that they did not like history. Sir Wilfrid's claim, made first in England and more recently in Quebec, that he had transformed Canada from a blotch on the map into a nation was ridiculed, and the audience keenly enjoyed Mr. Foster's trenchant reply.

Liberal Extravagance.

Taking up Sir Wilfrid's attempt to prove that his Government was not guilty of extravagance because he had a surplus, Mr. Foster showed that the deficits of the last years of Conservative ride was the country.

Taking up Sir Wilfrid's attempt to prove that his Government was not guilty of extravagance because he had a surplus, Mr. Foster showed that the deficits of the last years of Conservative rule was due entirely to the remission of taxes on sugar, etc., while the present Government had not only not reduced the incidence of taxation, but had added largely to the taxation.

Oldtime Pledges.

Hamilton, Ont., Nov. 8.—(Special.)—The Parks Committee met this afternoon and decided to recommend to the City Council that it take the necessary steps to place the city parks in the hands of a board of commissioners. Mulock's Dual Views.

Mulock's Dual Views.

Mr. Mulock had promised to have the salary of the Governor-General reduced, but he did so no longer. This same Mr. Mulock had denounced as iniquitous the appointing members of Parliament to offices. He even introduced a bill to prevent this practice, but though he had been in power three years no such bill had been passed. Worse than that, member after member had been appointed to office in direct violation of Liberal pledges. They condemned the granting of railway subsidies as being a means of parliamentary corruption. Sir Richard Cartwright told the Fatrons that on this question the Liberals were at one with the Patrons, yet in two years they had granted $11,000,000 in subsidies. They promised to reduce the number of Cabinet Ministers. They had increased the number instead of reducing it.

The Taxes Increased.

The Taxes Increased.

They were to make this a cheap country to live in by reducing the taxes and reducing the cost of goods to the consumer. They have added to the taxes and he would ask were the prices of goods of any kind reduced. Not a pledge had been redeemed and a party that would brazenly violate its pledges was unworthy of confidence or respect. Sir Wilfrid claimed to be a Liberal of the old school, but it was inconceivable that a Gladstone or a Rosebery could so violate their pledges. They Also Use Private Cars.

They Also Use Private Cars.

They were to have no private cars, but now they are in constant requisition, though now they salved their consciences by calling them "officers on wheels." The example of a country's public men was one which we should be able to hold up for the imitation of their children. Could a Liberal father point to Srr Wifrid's example as a pledge breaker as one his boy should imitate? We should be able to place confidence in the integrity of our fellows and it is the duty of the electorate to insist upon public men keeping their pledges.

The Transvaal Contingent.

Mr. Foster dealt with the subject of the sending of the contingent to the Transvaal and arraigned the policy, the unimperial policy, of the Government. He repudlated the false cry that the Conservatives were guilty of raising a race issue. If it were concelvable that Mr. Mulock, for example, were the Premier and had his actions been as Sir Wilfrid's, the same condemnation would be meted out to him. The Government had been forced by public opinion to concede one point after another, and they would yet be forced to do all their full duty in the matter of aiding the Empire in its hour of trial.

The meeting closed with ringing cheers for the Queen, Mr. Foster and the candidate. The Transvaal Contingent.

The bride wore her traveling suit of navy blue Venetian cloth, and underneath the stylish little coat was a sapphire blue and white striped silk blouse, trimmed with blas folds of white satin and finished with a folded white satin collar. Her toque of sapphire blue velvet, spangled, was trimmed with grebe breast and white osprey, and her shower bouquet was of white roses. The groom's gift was a sunburst of pearls with a diamond centre.

Miss Lily White, the groom's sister, was bridesmald, gowned in navy blue cloth with red velvet toque. The groomsman was Dr. Herbert V. Malone, brother of the bride.

The wedding breakfast was served at Mr. Malone's residence on University-avenue, where the guests repaired after the church service. The table decorations were pink and white. A prettily arranged centrepiece of pink taffeta was laid beneath the bride's cake, and the flowers were pink and white carnations garlanded with smilax.
