General News.

Hamilton, Out., Oct. 29.—(Special.)—The City Council met to-night and despatched its business with more celerity than was anticipated when the meeting opened. Ald. Ten Eyck was appointed chairman, the Mayor being on a month's holiday for political purposes.

When the Board of Works report was under discussion Ald. Hobson complained about the slowness of the permanent road way work. He also wanted the city to get the money said to be owing to it for snow cleaning by the Street Railway Company, by suing for it, along with the other wits preding concerning the street renairs.

ALD. HOBSON HAD A COMPLAINT.

Col. McLaren and several officers of the 13th Regiment, Major Teetzel and A. E. Sch. Manning, president of the Canadian Club, met this afternoon in the officers' quarters at the Armory to arrange for the well coming of Hamilton's soldiers of the first contingent, who are to arrive home in a few days. It was decided to meet the returning soldiers at the T. H. & B. Stassation at 8.15 p.m. on the day of their arrival and have a big procession, with mit this can fireworks, to Victoris Park, where short speeches will be made. The procession is to include the 13th Regiment, 4th Field Battery and members of fraternal societies and bicycle clubs, etc. Should the weather be unsuitable for an outdoor demonstration, the procession Committee, and he will be assisted by Col. McLaren in the city will furnish the fireworks. If the weather is favorable Hamilton will repeat Ladysmith Day when the heroes return, which is expected to be on Thursday or Friday evening.

A Little Humor Introduced.

Sir Charles grew witty when he referred to the great statesmanship of Conservatives and the efforts made by the Liberal party to obstruct those projects that made Canada what she is to-day. Mr. Fielding's secessionist record was enlarged on, and Sir Charles declared: "I have his Canada what she is to-day. Mr. Fielding's secessionist record was enlarged on, and Sir Charles declared: "I have his he (Lord Strathcona) first accepted to the office of the High Commissioner in London. When he (Lord Strathcona) first accepted the office it was with very great rejuctance because he felt that it had been in the office it was not to be regarded as a position of emolument. He had been but a short time most capable hands before him. He only accepted it on the understanding that it was not to be regarded as a position of emolument. The Horse-Stealing Story.

Sir Charles told his horse story of how Sir Wilfrid had stolen the National Policy horse. Essex's chief pastime is horse-racing, and the story made a great hit. They had to steal the florse or ruin Canada. [Laughter.] He was glad they had stolen the horse. [Applause.]

The record or broken promises of the Laurier Government was held up for inspection, and by analogy with the ruies of honesty in vogue in private life Sir Charles demonstrated to his audience that—they could not conscientiously give their could dence to such falsifiers of their word.

Preferential Trade.

The wobbling of Sir Wilfrid on the question of mutual preferential trade was briefly outlined as a basis for the speech to follow from John Lowles, ex-M.P. Mr. Lowles was referred to as one of the ablest members of the United Empire League, He had sat six years in the imperial House as a supporter of Lord Saltsbury. He had worked Australasia in the interest of mutual preference. [Applause.] Mr. Lowles could testify that the majority of the 60,000 per ple in Haggerston Division. London, would support such a policy. [Applause.] As a reply to Sir Wilfrid's statement that such a policy could not be advocated in Shefield. Sir Charles and had record the policy had recently been elected in that very constituency. Concluding Peroration.

Sir Charles closed with a glowing peroration, pointing out how the loyalty of Canada, shown when the Empire was distressed, brought nearer the day when mutual preferential trade would be the polloy for the whole Empire. [Applause.]

Just before he sat down he referred to the million-dollar insurance he had been able to place on the fives of the first contingent. The company with which the insurance was placed was paying out $40,000 as soon as they could get the necessary legal information regarding heirs. [Applause.] He then charged that The Globe had announced prior to the sailing of the first contingent that the Government proposed to insure each man for $1000. But three days after they sailed The Globe took it all back. [Groans.]

Alien Labor Law.

Pressed by the andience, Sir Charles determined to the Conservative of the Conse pany, East Main-street, to consider the proposal to continue the line to St. Catharines, Niagara and Niagara-on-the-Lake. The company considered a proposition to build to St. Catharines two years ago, but abandoned the idea on account of the great expense of bridging the ravines between Beamsville and St. Catharines.

To-day's meeting was presided over by C. J. Myles, president, and a general discussion of the project resulted in the shareholders endorsing the proposal and authorizing the directors to take the necessary steps to extend the road.

Reception to the Soldiers.

Col. McLaren and several officers of the 18th Regiment, Major Hendrie of the 4th Field Battery, Ald. Ten Eyek, Walker, Nicholson, Dwyer and Evans of the Finance Committee, Mayor Teetzel and A. E. Manning, president of the Canadian Club, met this afternoon in the officers' quarters at the Armory to arrange for the well come of Hamilton's soldiers of the first contrigent, who are to arrive home in a few days. It was decided to meet the returning solders at the T. H. & S. Star.

[Cheers.] As to the present Ministry, with all the talents it was like the woman who could not boil a potato to save her life. [Laughter.] What Canadians wanted was not all talents, but some statesmanship, some visible work. [Applause.] Preferent that trade meant the opening of a new era for the Empire, the most generous and prosperous and happy in all the ages. There was within the four corners of the Empire. It was natural and logical to make use of that fact. [Applause.] What was the position of the question in England the spoke of what he knew. He had got into Parliament from a constituency of 60. Oo, packed within a quarter of a square mile, elected on this very policy. [Applause.] Other civic ridings were just as enthusiastic over the question. He predicted that the obnoxious clauses eradicated from the Belgian treaties would never be re-inserted because they obstructed mutual trin's best customers were the colonies. Then, why not exploit that idea?

Lasting Union Needed.

What was needed was a lasting union of the colonies with the Mother Country. The United States and other countries had now the trade, but the transportation facilities in Canada gave her a great prospect for trating over all that trade, especially in the fade of the colonies with the trade, expectation of the colonies and the colonies with the trade, expectation of the colonies of the colonies with the Mother Country. It was, he reminded them, only a few years ago since the colonists were regarded in England as people whom it was very well to be civil to, but for whom it it was hardly worth while to cross from one side of the street to the other.
