NATIONAL RAILWAYS CARRY CZECHO-SLOVAKS

Six special trains of the Canadian National Railways are speeding across Canada carrying 8,428 Czech-Slovak ex-prisoners of Russia to Valcartier camp, where they will remain until the arrival of the ships which will carry them back to their various European homes.

These men have been prisoners of war since the Brest-Litovsk treaty, which the Russians were forced to sign in 1917. Under the terms of that treaty they were released and were then employed against the Bolsheviki forces in Russia. Following the triumph of the Bolsheviki during the last campaign they were driven eastward thru Russia and were finally packed up in Vladivostok when it was invested by the successful Red army.

The Canadian government gave their consent to allow them to come thru Canada in order that they need not travel across Bolsheviki territory, and they arrived in Vancouver on the S. S. Dollar, of the Dollar Line, on the morning of June 22.

DR. GLOVER HOLDS HIS SECOND CLINIC

Preferable Cancer Cases Testify to Improvement After Treatment.

A second general clinic for unoperable cancer cases was held by Dr. Thomas J. Glover, the discoverer of a new serum for the treatment of cancer, at St. Michael's Hospital yesterday.

The results reported at the clinic of a score of cases which had received one two or three injections, were with one exception, to the effect that the patients felt much improved, had better appetites, less pain and were much more cheerful.

Dr. Glover asked all his patients to tell him the worst and impressed upon them the necessity for truthful statements as to their conditions. The one case that showing improvement was that of Walter Good, a man of 73 years of age, who complained of shooting pains in the head. Good had his first treatment last week. Dr. Glover told him he was suffering a reaction from the serum, but said he thought he would break up the pain all right.

One of the most remarkable cases was that of George Stevens, a middle-aged man, who has undergone several operations without success. Saturday he was written in pain, but when he learned that Dr. Glover had a serum for cancer he cried aloud for an injection. His condition was such that he was "doubtful" whether he was brought in for a treatment. Since the first injection he has shown steady improvement and yesterday, when he was brought in again for his second "shot," he walked in, unassisted, his back erect and his manner bright and cheerful.

Stevens said the doctor that he could eat like a horse and that for breakfast he had tea, toast and corn flakes. Margaret McClung, an elderly woman from the home for incurables, who had had two treatments, said she was positive she felt better. Her condition was generally improved since receiving the first injection.

"Has your pain been relieved?" the doctor asked J. Mizel of 199 Major street. "Oh, yes, I feel better," came the reply, and he extended his bare right arm for a second injection. "Throat Cancer Better." A case of throat cancer frankly admitted that he felt much better since being treated with the serum. "Do you feel?" he was asked. "Well, I eat and sleep better."

A young woman of 35, suffering from an abdominal cancer, was brought in on a stretcher. She received her first treatment on Saturday. At that time she was so weak she could scarcely raise her arm and she showed no interest in anything about her. Her speech was disconnected and unintelligent. Yesterday morning Dr. Glover was himself surprised at her condition. "She's improved all right," he remarked. The patient herself looked bright and spoke quite intelligently. She appeared to be interested in her surroundings and answered questions to the point. "I have no pains," she said simply.
