Emperor Nicholas and the Dowager press stood with the broken-hearted widow and the children of the minister at the foot of a great mound of flowers on which rested the casket. To the right, on gold-embroidered cushions, before a mass of wreaths banked to the ceiling, were ranged the decorations which had been worn by the statesman during his notable career. To the left were the Metropolitan of St. Petersburg and the officiating bishops and riests in their gold-emblazoned vestents. A screen of flowers concealed famous imperial boys' choir. Among those present were other members of the imperial family, the foreign representatives, including Spencer Eddy, charge d'affaires of the American embassy, ministers of the empire, generals, admirals, nobles, and

ST. PETERSBURG, July 31.-M. Von was over five miles, and also because plehve, the minister of the interior, of the condition of the empress, his majesty soon entered his carriage and returned to the Peterhof palace.

At the end of the procession came four white chariots filled with the floral offerings. The cortege proceeded slowly through the avenues and streets, preceded by a squad of mounted police and passed within sight of the place where the tragedy occurred. The sidewalks along the route were crowded, but lines, of police kept the streets clear to the curbs. As the body passed every head was uncovered and thousands crossed themselves.
