The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Margaret Dwyer, of Milford, who was daintily gowned in white point d'esprit over ivory and large picture hat, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

The groom was supported by William J. Fitzgerald. After the ceremony the bridal party drove to the residence of the bride where a dainty breakfast was served, after which Mr. and Mrs. Burns left on the Prince Rupert for a trip through Nova Scotia. MARGARET ANGLIN VISITS SCENE OF FIRST TRIUMPH

Famous Actress Calls at Her Old Home, on Waterloo Street, where She Played Shakespeare in the Barn -- Talks Interestingly About Days of Her Childhood--Pleased with St. John.

Margaret Anglin believes that she could find her way around St. John in the dark and harbors a desire to put her local knowledge to the test. She confided this to a Standard representative who had a delightful little chat with her after the performance last evening. It was hardly an interview; rather in the nature of an informal talk, the talk, and carried on at the door of the star's dressing room to the accompaniment of the stage hands "striking" the last set.

"Do you know," she said, "I have noticed very little change in St. John from the city I used to know. There has been a change, a great change I am told, but you must remember that I was but seven years of age when I left here and the outstanding features of the city which impressed themselves on me as a child are still the same. I could go to them all. In fact I think I could find my way around St. John in the dark and I should rather like to try."

Saw Scene of First Triumphs. The first thing Miss Anglin did in her leisure time after her arrival on Sunday was to take a look at the house in which she spent part of her childhood. It is the Waterloo street residence, now occupied by David Connell and she found it but little changed from the days when she used to play Shakespeare in the barn. It was not always with the parental consent either, although Miss Anglin did not give away family secrets to that extent. The Standard man learned this much from an enthusiastic citizen who confided the information that he had been an active participant in those productions in the Waterloo street barn.

"I went to see my old nurse today," Miss Anglin continued. "I had always had a hazy idea of going to see an operatic production in St. John—I imagine it must have been in the old institute, where Pinaflore and Candelaria and all sorts of things were all jumbled up. I fancied I was about seven years old at that time, but my nurse tells me I was but two and a half. Yet I can remember it quite well, so you see I have a very vivid recollection of my life in St. John.

Glad To Get Back. "And I am glad to get back here. It has been a very real pleasure to me to be among my own people again, for I feel that they are my own, and I wish I could say I had been born here—but I can't. I was, I believe, the only baby ever born in the Speaker's apartments in the Dominion Parliament. Still that it is not much of a distinction, I would rather have been born in St. John, my heart is here.

"I like all the Canadian cities, that is except Hamilton, Ontario, and I don't like that town." The Standard man did not press for cause, but attempted to ask Miss Anglin her reasons for changing from emotional work to light comedy such as Green Stockings. It appeared to be the proper thing to talk shop to one who has made such a success of her life work as the gifted Canadian.

Pleased With Our Boom. Miss Anglin, however, appeared to prefer to talk about St. John and expressed her pleasure at the reports of the period of expansion upon which this city has embarked. "It is right that it should be so, for St. John is a dear old city. You have the advantages here and should prosper. The only regret I have, is that many of my boy and girl friends have gone away. Older friends of my father and mother are dead and the younger ones have gone. Still I have met a number and they have been very kind."

Asked as to her preference for Green Stockings over other and more ambitious bills, Miss Anglin said that the real test of an artist was versatility. "I have done fairly well in emotional roles, and I wanted to see if I could be successful in comedy," she said. "I understand the people here seem to like to see me in a heavier line and I would like to please them. If I can, I would like to make an annual visit to this city. I have always wanted to, but never could do it before as I was under a manager, and had other plans mapped out. To be able to come this time has been very pleasant and I have enjoyed it."

There was a very large audience in the theatre last evening and the production was in every way a success. His Honor Lieutenant Governor Wood and party attended and during the evening Miss Anglin was presented to them. The engagement will close tonight, and the company will go on to Amherst and Halifax for the balance of the week.
