

POLICE FORCE EFFICIENT BUT EQUIPMENT LACKING, OPINION

Evidence of Deputy Chief Jenkins Contains Statement to this Effect — Witnesses Tell of Workings of Force and of Certain Alleged Thefts.

WHAT WAS SAID AT THE POLICE INVESTIGATION LAST EVENING

Commissioner McLellan: "We all know that the police beats are too long."

Deputy Chief Jenkins: "For an efficient detective force you need intelligent bright men, the brainiest you can find, proper headquarters and ready cash at its disposal. For the chances it has I believe that the St. John police force compares favorably with those of the same size in other cities."

The session of the police investigation last evening did not draw a large crowd as many of the other sessions, but the spectators' space was well filled. The evidence was mostly concerned with ordinary police regulations and with the workings of the force. William E. Richards, advertising representative for the Imperial Tobacco Co. of Canada in New Brunswick, told of samples of tobacco being taken from his office in Prince William street and that the name of Perry had been mentioned in connection with the affair. The police were thought to be responsible for the tobacco being taken.

Policeman Charles Rankine said that he had seen Sergeant Campbell carrying lumber one morning about 5 o'clock in Richmond street. Rankine could only remember of one instance when he used his baton freely, but he had known cases where he felt that he would have been justified in using the stick.

Deputy Chief Frederick Jenkins was also on the stand and was carefully questioned in regard to his appointment and his duties in connection with the force. He did not consider that the St. John detective force was an efficient one when compared with other departments. For the chances it has he felt that the St. John police force compared favorably with those of the same size in other cities.

Policeman Charles Rankine was first on the stand. He was appointed to the force in 1897 by Chief Clark but had never passed an examination of any kind. He had not at the time of joining been given instructions in regard to use of baton, handcuffs or revolver. He had visited several places to rest but had not played cards in any of them. He had heard of the loss of the loss of Patrolman Marshall. While working under Sergeant Campbell he had been asked to arrest Campbell's own brother but he did not think he should be locked up for drunkenness.

Q—Did you hear of any officer on the force being suspected of theft?
A—Yes, I saw Perry.
Q—Anyone else?
A—Yes, Campbell.
Q—Did you ever see Campbell carrying lumber?
A—Yes, once.
Q—When?
A—One morning in Richmond and Exmouth streets about five o'clock.

Q—Did you ever hear of Campbell taking sand?
A—Yes, I heard of him and Marshall taking sand.

Q—Where from?
A—From Water street.
Q—Did you ever hear of any five dollar bills?
A—Yes, the wet one.

Q—Did any one ever tell you they saw Campbell carrying a bundle?
A—Yes, Sergeant Finley told me he saw him with a bundle under his cape.

Several questions in regard to the Goggin enquiry were also answered. Rankine was also asked if he had seen a man named Fox. He had seen the prisoner with clothes on his head but he did not see the cut.

Q—What happened to Fox afterwards?
A—I heard that he went to the asylum and died there.

Q—Do you know Mabel Smith?
A—Yes.
Q—Did you ever hear that she paid Campbell?
A—Yes.

Q—What did you hear?
A—I heard among the men that she paid him $500 a week.

Q—Tell us how you heard it?
A—in an argument between Kane and Gardiner, after the last investigation.

In answer to further questioning Rankine said that he had only found it necessary on one occasion to use his baton, but there were several other times when he would have felt justified in using it.

Patrolman Powers, who said he was appointed to the force on September 3, a year ago, told of being recommended by Commissioner McLellan and receiving the appointment. After joining the force he had been forced to pay taxes to cover each year back to 1907.

Q—Are you a card player?
A—No.
Policeman James Pitt was the next witness.

Q—How old are you?
A—Thirty-five.
Commissioner McLellan: "You are getting younger. At the last investigation you said you were thirty-eight."

Policeman Pitt said that he had been on the force before his present term but had resigned. His other evidence was in connection with the routine of the force.

William E. Richards, advertising representative for the Imperial Tobacco Company, said it was customary for quantities of tobacco to be kept in the office at 85½ Prince William street. Several times he had heard Mr. Bryden, a former sales manager, complain of the loss of tobacco and one night in particular thirty or forty cans of special sample tobacco had been taken.

The matter had been reported to the police and Detective Killen and Deputy Jenkins had visited him in his room.

Q—What happened then?
A—Killen said the tobacco was for giving away and I said yes. He said well it has been given away. I never heard anything more of the affair.

Deputy Chief Jenkins was next on the stand. His evidence showed that he was appointed in 1883 by Chief Marshall. He had undergone a medical examination as well as being examined in reading, writing and presented recommendations. He was also supplied with a copy of rules and regulations governing the force.

Q—Do you know of officers being appointed who could not read or write?
A—Yes, one.
Q—What was the age limit when you went on the force?
A—I do not know.

In defining his duties the deputy said that the sergeants reported to him and he summarized the reports and submitted it to the chief. He had heard the chief read rules to the men, but there had been no copies of the Marshall manual for distribution when Chief Clark was appointed. The deputy had been on the force several years before the present chief came into office. Witness said that he was one of the oldest officers on the force.

Q—Do you consider your detective force an efficient one?
A—Not from the standpoint of other departments. We have not the equipment.

Q—What would you consider as necessary equipment for a detective force?
A—Intelligent, bright men, the brainiest men you can get, proper headquarters and plenty of ready cash at their disposal.

Q—Then the St. John force has never been properly equipped?
A—No, not in my day.

Q—What is your opinion of the St. John police force as a whole?
A—They are some pretty good men on the St. John police force.

Q—What are the troubles?
A—Long hours and the men are overworked.

He thought that the lack of a superannuation fund was responsible for the older men not retiring, and he believed that the force had always been undermanned and under officered.

He believed that a force should have proper training.

Q—Then in order to have men properly trained it would be necessary to have proper trainers?
A—Except the trainers would be necessary. A patrol system would also be needed.

The witness then told of conditions in Halifax, where he had spent four hours. After twenty-five years of service they were pensioned on five-sevenths pay. As a consequence young men were kept on the force.

Com. McLellan: "I have no doubt Halifax is more generous than St. John with her police force."

In regard to what the men did in the early hours of the morning, the deputy had not been in a position to find out.

In answer to a question from the commissioner he said that he regarded Sergeant Campbell as a good officer. He felt sure that the force had been doing good work even if the members were not obeying the rules strictly.

Henry Kilpatrick, sergeant in the North End division, was next called. He had been appointed in the City of Portland before the union with St. John. When he came under Chief Marshall he was given a copy of rules but had later lent them to another officer and had forgotten who it was.

He had heard of Officer Perry and the Cronin case. The witness was questioned in regard to a boy arrested for setting a bonfire but the sergeant was not on duty at the time of the arrest.

The hearing will be continued again this evening. It is likely that Chief Clark will be recalled for a time to night.

BIG PROGRAMME AT UNIQUE THEATRE

Thrilling Tale of War between North and South Proves Interesting to all — Others Good.

A conflict between love and duty in which the latter eventually wins is depicted in the story "The Girl Spy's Atonement," which is one of the features of the Unique's bill for the week opening. Dealing with the still time of the war between the North and South, the picture shows the loyalty of Norma, the handsome daughter of a Confederate general, for whom the denunciation of the story is any danger for the cause. The picture pleasingly accurate to requirements as to local coloring, etc. is well acted and a pretty romance which runs through the picture further enhances its value.

"Flesh of His Flesh" is another strong drama in the programme. It is the story of mis-mated affection terminating in the divorce court. The mother retains possession of the son. The denunciation of the story is such as an audience would desire while the story in the course of portraiture introduces an abundance of entertaining situations.

To relieve the tension created by these two pictures two sparkling comedies have been added to the programme. "The Devilish Doctor" is an excellent comedy sketch. "O Such a Beautiful Ocean." These supply merriest enough to take the mind of the spectator from the more serious mood into which he is cast by the other two films and gives him the variety which makes the Unique's programmes always a delight.

Health and Beauty Helps

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN.

Twenty-Two: I am convinced that the lifeless, aged appearance of your skin is the result of using powder to excess. A plain soap powder is an excellent skin cleanser, beautifier and tonic. This is made at home by dissolving four ounces aprunax in one half pint hot water (or witch hazel) and adding two teaspoonful glycerine. This aprunax lotion does not give to the complexion a pink appearance. It brings out the natural health tone, because it frees the skin of the oily, "muddy" condition and insures the absorption of oxygen. This lotion will not spot nor blow off and seems part of the skin.

A. L.: The delicate treatment for hairy growth is quite harmless and rarely is more than one application required. Mix a little powder with one with water and apply to the objectionable hairs, then after two or three minutes rub it off, and the hairs come with it. Washing the skin leaves it firm and free from blemish.

Dolly: Your itchy scalp can be relieved and cured, as well as the falling hair, by the use of a quinine tonic which at least a dozen of my personal friends are using and making at home from an ounce of quinine dissolved in a half pint of alcohol, to which should be added a half pint of water. They use this regularly by massaging into the roots of the hair and they claim the itching stops immediately and the tonic improves the growth of hair and the nature make it beautiful and healthy.

Gertrude: I am sure you will learn the never-shampoo idea for I wrote through my correspondents that neglecting to cleanse the hair is nearly as injurious as the use of soap and other harmful mixtures. So I would shampoo with canthox at least once a month during fall and I think you will find its healthy gloss and evenness of color. A teaspoonful of canthox dissolved in a cup of hot water is quite enough mixture for thorough shampoo, and after rinsing well, the hair dries very quickly. The regular use of canthox for shampooing keeps the scalp cool and healthy, promotes growth of hair, lustrous and beautiful.

Anna: No, don't make yourself miserable by unnecessary dieting or indulging in violent exercise to reduce fat. Make up and take this simple reducer and your weight will soon be just where you want it: Dissolve four ounces aprunax in one and one-half pints hot water; when it cools strain and take a tablespoonful before meals. This aprunax reducer acts gently, is quite harmless, and a truly satisfactory results are quickly attained.

Hortense: Indeed, you can easily cure that tired, depressed feeling which is accompanied with such a sallow condition of the face. They are caused by a sluggish blood. Very common in the fall months, which is not properly eliminating the poisons from the system. Try this blood purifier and tonic: Into one-half pint alcohol (whisky must not be used), pour one ounce karsden, then add one-half cupful sugar and hot water to make a full quart. Take one tablespoonful of this old-fashioned blood cleanser and tonic before each meal. This is splendid for that weak, worn feeling and restores the kidneys to normal action and the blood to a healthy condition. It timely use will save much serious sickness.

Oliver: Yes, I know a sure cure for wrinkles which can be cheaply made at home. I mix one ounce almond oil with one-half pint cold water and add two teaspoonful glycerine. Stir and let stand for one day. To remove or prevent wrinkles, apply this vegetable cream-thickly and massage thoroughly. At night leave the face covered with the cream. You will find nothing to equal almond jelly-cream to remove wrinkles and keep them away as it costs only a few cents.

Lacy: You want to brighten, and strengthen your eyes and can easily do so by using this plain crystal eye-tonic in which I have great faith because of the good it has done in so many instances, and I am sure if you put two or three drops of it in your eyes at frequent intervals, the inflammation will disappear. To prepare this inexpensive tonic, dissolve one ounce crystal in a pint clear water. To dull, inflamed eyes it will lend a youthful sparkle and fascinating expression.

STOCK CO. IMPERIAL PLAY

"Merely Mary Ann," at the Opera House, Proved a Delightful Novelty—Company Seen to Advantage.

The Thompson-Woods Stock Company appeared to a St. John audience last evening in a play of a new character, a charming story in quiet subdued tone, without a villain with no robust plot, but telling a delightful little tale, and introducing several especially well drawn character types.

It was Miss Frances Brant's night at the Opera House, and in the production of "Merely Mary Ann" that charming and talented lady was seen to distinct advantage. The piece was originally written for a female star, and it gave Miss Brant the best opportunity she has yet had to display her splendid abilities as an emotional actress. In the first three acts, in the role of the work-worn, ignorant "elaborer" of the boarding house, she was superb, and her work in this line was only equalled by the ease and grace she displayed as the refined sociable girl in the last act. The transformation from one to the other, each requiring different treatment, was handled with rare ability. Miss Brant has done good work in other roles, but nothing to compare with what she favored us with last evening.

Honors are also due to Miss Bridges and Miss Marjorie Davis, as Mrs. Lead-batter and Rosie Leadbatter, respectively. Miss Bridges portrayed the keeper of the cheap London boarding house to perfection. Her makeup was excellent and her dialect inimitable. Miss Davis had the best part, who has yet appeared in, and she played with an appreciation of its opportunities rarely found in so young an actress. In the music scene she was especially good, and through-out she won much commendation. She is to be congratulated on the excellent work she has done in this rather difficult part.

Although the ladies of the company the opportunities of the evening the gentlemanly part was played by Mr. A. McHenry, in the role of Lancelot, had a part that it was difficult to bring into the sympathies of the audience, as it was rather of an anomic type and lacking in real character. As a man, Lancelot was not as good a character as that of his friend, Peter, but from an artistic standpoint, Mr. McHenry was decidedly convincing and his conception of the role was good. He was good in his comedy lines and handled the deeper situations with skill and discernment. Mr. Weyer was well cast as the jovial Peter. He was at all times the good fellow the author intended. A convincing character sketch was that of Rev. Samuel Smede as done by Mr. Drummond, while Mr. St. John as Herr Brahms was thorough at home. The other members of the company were adequate in minor parts.

As usual with the Thompson-Woods Company the piece was well staged and dressed with attention to the time and locale. In the last act one or two of the company were hardly fastidious in their criticism of the remainder of the week. For a first performance it was wonderfully good.

story, a good plot and an audience finds every inch of the lengthy film full of interest.

Douglas Washburn and Company who present a farce comedy "Enter-taining the Colonel," were very much the centre of attraction with last night's audiences. Mr. Washburn, an Irish comedian, plays a prominent part in the sketch and his witticisms kept the audiences last night in the best of humor. The sketch in itself is breezy, full of bright repartee, with a little music interspersed and altogether makes an excellent feature. Those taking part in the sketch are clever entertainers and their contribution to the programme is one which adds to an already excellent bill.

The same bill will be repeated to-night and those who are on the Lyric's visiting list for this evening are assured of a delightful hour.
