GERMAN PRISONERS ESCAPE AT AMHERST

Twelve Dig a Tunnel and Obtain Freedom.

Amherst, Jan. 18—Twelve German prisoners escaped from the internment camp on the Amherst Highlands at an early hour this morning, but no information concerning the event leaked out until well along in the afternoon.

It is understood that the prisoners tunneled their way under the walls of the building well out past the entanglements. If such is the case the tunnel undoubtedly would have been started underneath a bunk, as a previous occasion, and the distance to go would be some 20 or 30 feet.

In some manner unknown, the Germans kept at their attempt to secure freedom without the knowledge of their guards, who have been extremely vigilant.

Practically every town in the Maritime Province has been notified of the escape of the Teutons and an early capture is looked for. Parties of guards scoured the surrounding country-side this afternoon, and while traces of the men were rumored, tonight they had not been located.

Mr. P. E. Lloyd had a very serious attack of heart failure on Thursday last shortly after the dinner hour. He had planned on going to Aylesford that day to visit his daughter, Mrs. McMahon, but was fortunately delayed by a failure to find his mileage ticket. Otherwise he might have had the stroke on the train or where help could not have reached him quickly. The physician was summoned as soon as it was noticed that he was ailing and promptly saved his life. Even for a time his heart stopped its regular beating. He has been in a most critical condition ever since.
