The sun's rays felt delightful on his back, and he could fairly feel himself grow.

He looked up at his big, lovely mother, and hoped he would soon grow to be big and beautiful like her; and he nearly fell asleep with the pure bliss of living when something happened, and Taddy and his mother found themselves in the water making frantic efforts to hide under the roots of the weeds. A vicious stone had hit the log just between them.

"That stone was thrown at us by a very bad boy," said Mother Frog.
"Why? Did he want to hurt us?" said Taddy trembling with fright.
"Yes, my child; he would like to kill us."

"I don't see why," said Teddy; "we don't want to hurt him!" And the little Frog lay a long time quietly among the weeds thinking about the many queer things in this strange world into which he had come!

—Emma E. Lente.

A Farewell

My fairest child, I have no song to give you;
No lark could pipe to skies so dull and gray;
Yet, ere we part, one lesson I can leave you
For every day:
Be good, sweet maid, and let who will be clever;
Do noble things, not dream them, all day long;
And so make life, death, and that vast forever
One grand, sweet song.

—Charles Kingsley.

Operative

Dr. Cyrus L. Cutler, the well-known Springfield surgeon, is a member of the Colonial Club, an institution that fines its members for talking shop.

Doctor Cutler, getting out of his motor-car, entered the Colonial Club the other day for luncheon, and advancing into the restaurant, said to a lawyer, as he took off his goggles:

"Well old man, how are you?"

The lawyer got Doctor Cutler fined then and there for talking shop.

The next day, when he arrived at the club again for luncheon, the surgeon, angered at what had happened, cut the lawyer. The latter then had him fined once more.
