MRS. FRED. PENNY, R.R. No. 4, Norwich, Ont., suffered from anaemia for over three years. Though taking medicine all that time, nothing helped her till she began Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

"I had no appetite," she writes. "I could not sleep. My blood almost turned to water. I was weak and my heart would palpitate violently. I am thankful to say that in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I found the relief I sought. My color returned, my appetite improved, my weight increased fifteen pounds, and it was not long till I could perform my work with ease."

If you are weak and easily tired, subject to headaches, are pale, without appetite, and your work seems a burden, do not delay. Start treatment at once by buying a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at your medicine dealer's or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"A HOUSEHOLD NAME IN 54 COUNTRIES"

DON'T READ THIS Dear Mick—O! have lost yer address, and as O! can't find it, will ye send it on to me as soon as possible, if not sooner. O! want to tell ye that poor Uncle Dan died yer suddint after a long and serious illness. He laid for many days quiet and speechless all the time asking for water with a little whiskey. The doctor tells me he died through illness, but, Mickey, me bhoy, between ourselves, stoppage of the heart was the cause of his death. He was eighty-five years of age last March, all but fifteen months, and had he lived till now he would have been dead a fortnight. O! would beg of ye not to break the seal of this letter until two or three days after ye have read it, by which time ye will be more prepared for the sorrowful news.—With love, from Pat.

Reduce the Acid

Sick stomachs, sour stomachs and indigestion usually mean excess acid. The stomach nerves are over-stimulated. Too much acid makes the stomach and intestines sour. Alkali kills acid instantly. The best form is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia, because one harmless, tasteless dose neutralizes many times its volume in acid. Since its invention, 50 years ago, it has remained the standard with physicians everywhere.

Take a spoonful in water and your unhappy condition will probably end in five minutes. Then you will always know what to do. Crude and harmful methods will never appeal to you. Go prove this for your own sake. It may save a great many disagreeable hours. Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any drugstore.

Left-Handedness

It appears quite clearly from statistics published by Herbert D. Chamberlain, of Ohio State University, in "The Journal of Heredity" (Washington) that left-handedness is inherited. "From families in which one or both of the parents are left-handed we get a percentage of 17.34 per cent. of the children left-handed, while in families in which neither of the parents are left-handed only 2.1 per cent. of the children are left-handed. If left-handedness is not inherited we would not find over 5 per cent. of the children left-handed in any of these families, regardless of the handedness of their parents. It is very evident that there is some sex influence manifested in the inheritance of left-handedness as shown by the larger number of left-handed boys in this population. It is also apparently transmitted differently where the father is left-handed, as noted the small number of left-handed girls in these families. There can be no doubt that the trait is inherited. Siemens presents twenty-one cases of apparently identical twins in which one was left-handed and the other right-handed, and cites this as evidence that left-handedness is not an hereditary factor. The probable explanation of this is mirror imaging, so often found in identical twins, or it may possibly be the parental position of the right-handed twin, which would prevent it from developing into a left-handed one."

Publicity

G.G. in the Nation and Athenaeum (London). The trade of a publicity agent is apparently a lucrative one. The trained eye can detect in the columns of newspapers and magazines much that is apparently news but is really advertisement. The late C. E. Montague recorded that during the War many things that would have been regarded as "unsporting" at the beginning became the regular practice later on. A similar deterioration seems to have taken place in this matter of self-advertisement. Much that would have been regarded as gross and ungentlemanly by fathers seems to have become the common usage of to-day.

No pot of gold rests at the end of the rainbow, for the air mail has proved the meteorological phenomenon to be a perfect circle instead of an arc. Many flyers have seen this phenomenon when flying above the clouds with the sun at their backs.

Thousands of mothers use no other medicine for their little ones. Among them is Mrs. J. H. Bromley, Westmeath, Ont., who writes:—"I have four children and whenever any of them are ill I always use Baby's Own Tablets and have found them good in every way. I would not be without the Tablets and would also like your little booklet Care of the Baby in Health and Sickness."

As England Sees Passing of Foch

It Was Given to Him to Save the Allied Cause and He Saved It GREATEST SOLDIER

"In his own medium he was a genius of the first order. Englishmen of the war generation will never forget the debt they owe to his genius. And in military history his place is definitely assured."—Daily News. "Marshal Foch is the second figure of the World War. The first is, and always will be, the 'Unknown Soldier.' And perhaps it is the fairest commentary on Foch, as soldier, that he will always remain second to this myriad unknown."—Birmingham Post. "There can be little doubt that Marshal Foch was the greatest soldier of the war. The theories which he held and preached in time of peace were justified in practice, and all that, as Professor of the Ecole de Guerre, he had urged on the young soldier prepared to be the essential doctrine in modern warfare," says the Yorkshire Post, and all the tributes to his memory bear testimony that of the great military figures he stands out pre-eminent.

This admission does not lessen the British regard and appreciation of the late Lord Haig, but when the "unified command" was agreed to, the fact that Foch was made the head of the combined forces gave him first place in his lifetime, and it is not likely to be taken from him by historians now that he is dead. As the Times says: "The inevitable Commander

"It was Foch, the Frenchman, who was the ordained, the inevitable commander. The German breakthrough was the German undoing. It mobilized the trench-imprisoned armies it had gone near to shattering, and it freed trench-ridden minds. Above all, it liberated the aggressive genius of Foch. He was the man for his opportunity. It was given to him so save the Allied cause, and he saved it."

"What soldier could ask a more magnificent epitaph? No soldier of his day had a higher intellectual conception of the conduct of war. His practice, like his teaching, was a model—from the classic mould of the Latin mind—of logic and of fervour. He not only believed in the 'imponderables' of the arbiters of war. He embodied them—the will, the self-confidence, the passionate concentration upon mastery of the enemy commander's mind. They were felt throughout his own command. They were felt, as German memoirs have testified, among the enemy."

"The doctrine of the attack at all cost had some crude practitioners and some disastrous illustrations. It was susceptible of modification by mud, barbed wire, concrete, and machine-guns. But there has been in military history no clearer, no more consistent, and, in the end, no more triumphant exponent of the weight of moral factors in battle than the soldier of genius, the simple, chivalrous gentleman whose memory France and England proudly and sadly salute and honor to-day."

"Foch is no more," says the Morning Post. "The greatest Frenchman of this age has passed away—greatest in an age of great men; an age that knew great discoverers, inventors, authors, artists; an age essentially great in itself that saw France rise again from the bitterness of utter defeat. Foch was greatest because most needed in France's dark hour, greatest because he turned darkness into abounding light."

"A soldier all through, he was also a student," comments the Daily Chronicle, "deeply read, continually testing theories, though keenly alive to what no theory can give. One of his greatest qualities was his power to learn from his mistakes."

Error of Offensive at all Costs "At the outset of the War he was up to the neck in the disastrous error of the French High Command—the offensive at all costs and in any situation—which entailed over half France's casualties and nearly lost her the War. Gradually, through the War years, he unlearned it; and so slowly climber to that wonderful equipoise between patience and audacity, which so signally triumphed in 1918."

"Many of the world's great soldiers," points out the Daily Telegraph, "have been blighted by an ambition to play the role of the conqueror. Not so the General who, before his last summer campaign, publicly asked for the prayers of the children of France, and when the victory was won took his triumphs modestly and almost meekly. Ave atque vale. The perfect knight of a noble cause is dead, and the whole world springs to a last salute."

"Crowned with honor, fame, and the respect of the whole world, Ferdinand Foch has passed to his rest," says the Glasgow Herald. "For him, the latest and not the least in greatness of France's departed Marshals, how shall the oration funebre be most worthily framed?"

"His merits and achievements as a General of France and as Commander-in-Chief and leader of the congregated armies of the Allies to victory would seem to call for the breadth and the weight of Miltonic vowels. Or shall a few words of simple eloquence suffice, such as any child in Picardy and Artois can understand? With such the great Commander would himself be most pleased, for he, the 'foremost Captain of his time,' was also 'as the greatest only are, in his simplicity sublime.'"

"A brief recital of his deeds might

A QUICK WAY TO END BABY'S UPSET SPELLS

"Like other young mothers, I worried every time Baby cried," says a Syracuse, N.Y., woman. "Several times when she was upset or constipated, I tried castor oil but she couldn't retain it. Our doctor told me to try Fletcher's Castoria because it is harmless and babies like it. That ended my worries and I've used it since for all my children." Castoria never fails to delight mothers by the quick way it ends those upsets of babies and children, such as colic, constipation, colds, etc. That's the reason for its tremendous sale and popularity. Like all good things, it's imitated, but genuine Castoria—the purely-vegetable product—always bears the Fletcher signature.

The invisible difference

Many motor oils look alike, but there is a vast difference in the way they perform. Unfortunately this difference is difficult to detect.

The invisible difference which makes one motor oil better than another must be inherent in the crude from which it is made.

There you have the reason why Marvelube gives better engine lubrication than oils refined from ordinary crudes. Imperial Oil searched the world over for a better crude—and in South America they found it. From it they make Marvelube—a pure, carbon-free, full-bodied oil that resists the extreme heats and pressures of modern engine operation.

Aircraft operators prefer Marvelube because better lubrication means greater safety and longer intervals between overhauls. Motorists prefer Marvelube because it is the ideal oil for modern motors. It ensures greater power, greater flexibility and greater economy.

There is a grade of Marvelube refined to meet exactly the specifications of your car. Consult the Marvelube Chart at Imperial Oil service stations and dealers.
