Economy is one of the greatest of virtues but false economy is no more a virtue than anything else that is false. To be able to economize wisely is one of the greatest blessings that one can have, for it is the prerequisite to thrift and well-being. Too many persons, however, who think they have found the secret of true economy are practicing a false economy which is worse than wifely waste.

For instance, the man who buys a stove from a mail order house for $9 because he thinks he would have to pay $10 for one if he purchased it from his home merchant, is practicing a false economy, for the chances are that he would save more than $1 in the end if he purchased the $10 stove from the local hardware dealer.

There are several reasons why this is false economy. The first one is that dollar for dollar, the ed fairly closely the London line in its upper third, but in its lower two-thirds swing westward from its center to twenty miles, thus reducing the amount of territory to be granted Italy, and including Volosca, and a strip of the southeastern coast of the Itrian peninsula within the Jugoslavia domain. It, of course, gave Flume to the latter, as well as the whole of Dalmatia, Lissa and Avlona were allotted to Italy.

There followed a series of attempted compromises. On May 29th it was announced that Signor Orlando had accepted on behalf of Italy a proposal, approved by Pres. Wilson, by which Flume, without Sussak but with territory to the west reaching the Italian frontier, would be constituted an independent state to be controlled by the League of Nations. Italy was to abandon her claim to the Dalmatian hinterland, but to be given Zara and Sebenico in full sovereignty, with the islands of Cherso, Lussin, Lissa and Pelagossa. Further, she was to have a mandate for Albania.

But this plan of settlement was rejected by the Jugoslavs.

Then entered D'Annunzio to further complicate the situation. He seized Flume, where, against the will of a majority of the people, he still sticks. Affairs drifted, the powers awaiting some action on the part of Italy which would remove D'Annunzio as an embarrassment. Italy found the situation too delicate to handle with force.

Negotiations were resumed in October, resulting in the proposal for settlement made by the allied premiers in January. This provides for a small, autonomous Flume—a free city—but gives western Itrian and Volosca, as far as the outskirts of Flume to the Italians. The Jugoslavs get Sussak, while the port and rail terminals of Flume and the port of Baros, a part of Sussak, are to be administered by the League of Nations. Italy gets the islands of Lussin, Lissa and Pelagossa. The islands left to the Jugoslavs are to be demilitarized. The allied premiers then notified them that they would be compelled to enforce the treaty of London. At this point Pres. Wilson again interposed and the end is not yet.
