"NONPAREIL"
Billiard Hall!

SHARKEY'S BUILDING,
OPP. OFFICERS' BARRACKS, QUEEN ST., FREDERICTON, N. B.

T. E. FOSTER, Proprietor

THIS HALL has been newly fitted up, and handsomely furnished, and for room, light, ventilation and neatness, compares most favorably with any Billiard Hall in the Dominion. The Billiard and Pool Tables are pronounced by players to be the best in the Dominion. They are the BRILLIANT NOVELTY, size, 4 1/2 x 9 feet.

The main object in the construction of the Bil-liant Novelty, and the one most noticeable, is that it embodies all the more salient and most important features that have rendered popular all the other styles of Billiard Tables. The "Novelty" is made of the finest material, and is of the most perfect construction. It is the only Billiard Table in the Province that has all the above mentioned advantages. The "Novelty" is a happy combination of all those celebrated tables, and has rapidly taken the foremost place in the estimation of all players of Billiard and Pool Tables. The "Novelty" is finished and handsomely inlaid in many different colors, made up from California Laurel, Burl Ash, French Walnut, Bird's Eye Maple, Mahogany, Rose Wood, Tulip Wood and Ebony. It is supplied with the finest of Vermont State bed, Simons Cloth, and a first-class outfit of everything necessary.

A call is respectfully solicited from lovers of the game.

Boys under sixteen not allowed in the Hall.
Attendance drinks of all kinds, Cigars, etc.

THE EARL OF EUSTON WITHDRAWS HIS SUIT FOR DIVORCE.

LONDON, July 10.—The Earl of Euston and prospective Duke of Grafton has given up his efforts to rid himself of the woman he married some thirteen years ago. He was then plain Henry Fitzroy with a lineage dating back to one of the mistresses of King Charles II, but with little expectation of ever becoming an Earl, even by courtesy, and much less a duke. His wife was a woman of charming address and stylish appearance, and was known as Kate Cook. The marriage was clandestine, and it is only recently that her name has appeared in "Burke's Peerage."

1882, by a series of deaths in the family, Henry Fitzroy's father became the Duke of Grafton, and his eldest son, Henry became by courtesy Earl of Euston. His love for his spouse had long since cooled, and the fact that she was not now countess, and a prospective duchess, became intolerable to him. He was anxious to contract a marriage within the aristocratic sphere to which he then belonged, and many titled dames with marriageable daughters were more than willing to smooth his way to a proper alliance. The countess, however, had been a model of propriety since her marriage, and there was no ground upon which Lord Euston could put her aside.

A separation was mutually agreed upon, and Lord Euston sought in every direction for a plea upon which he could base an application for the annulment of the marriage. Last spring his detectives unearthed a man who said he could prove that he was the husband of Kate Cook at the time that she was married to the Earl. Lord Euston promptly brought suit for the annulment of his marriage and confronted his wife with her first husband, expecting to entrap her into a denial of the earlier marriage. To his amazement Lady Euston recognized her former husband and made no attempt whatever to dispute the fact of the marriage, but showed that he had fraudulently represented himself to her as a widower, when, in fact, he had a wife still living. The Countess claimed that this fraud on her part made his marriage with her null and void. The judge could not rule otherwise, and Lord Euston's case was promptly thrown out of court.

Driven to desperation, Lord Euston last month brought a suit for absolute divorce against his wife on the ground of adultery.
Nobody believed the charge, for the Countess had been exceedingly circum-spect from the moment of her marriage, but the Earl seemed convinced of its truth, and pushed the case against her as rapidly as he could. Recent investigations, however, have shown that the charge was trumped up by the detectives, who simply sought to keep up the Earl's pay, and who easily made him credit what he was so anxious to believe.
Lord Euston has now withdrawn his suit for divorce, and apparently nothing but her death can prevent the clever Kate Cook from wearing the coronet as Duchess of Grafton.

A FIGHTING O'BRIEN.
Sir Patrick Dares an Opponent Out of There was a somewhat remarkable scene in the House of Commons not long before the adjournment yesterday morning, says the London News of the 28th.
The revision of jurors' and voters' lists (county Dublin) bill was under consideration in committee, when Sir Patrick O'Brien arose, and remarking that the honorable member for Mallow (Mr.
O'Brien) interrupted him on a former occasion, asked him to explain what he wanted. This request Sir Patrick repeated several times, whereupon Mr. O'Brien said, "If the honorable baronet is at all curious as to what I meant, I would be glad to let him know some day in King's County." (Parnellite cheers.) Sir P.
O'Brien—"Mr. Otway—(laughter) Mr. O-way—(laughter)—Sir Arthur Otway, there is a much smaller distance than to the King's County at which the honorable member can ascertain what I think about him, and how I will deal with him.
(Lord laughter and cries of "order") Having said this, the honorable baronet sat down, and placing his hands on the bench before him, looked steadily across the House at Mr. O'Brien, at the same time calling out five or six times, "Afraid!" Mr. O'Brien attempted to rise, but was pulled down again by his friends, whereupon Mr. Patrick, amid much laughter, walked out of the House in a significant manner, apparently expecting the honorable gentleman to follow him. About a quarter of an hour afterward he returned, made his way with a little difficulty to Mr. O'Brien, addressed some observation to him and immediately quitted the House again. The honorable gentleman was not seen to make any reply, nor did he leave his seat till the House rose. Several other members of his party, however, went into the lobby from time to time, and, returning after brief intervals, brought news which was evidently more interesting than the bill under discussion.

Sara Bernhardt in English.
LONDON, June 9.—Mr. George Watts gave his annual concert to-day at the Royal Albert Hall. The most novel event of the occasion was the appearance of Mlle. Sara Bernhardt as an English elocutionist. She announced some days ago that in order to testify her appreciation of Irish poetry she would appear at this concert and recite—"The Last Rose of Summer"—in English. To-day she fulfilled her promise and surprised even her friends by her exquisite reading of the poem. She displayed quite an unexpected amount of power and pathos, and was compelled to respond to four recalls by the delighted audience.

Death of Paul Morphy.
NEW ORLEANS, La., July 10, 1884. Paul Morphy, the famous chess player, died here this evening.
Paul Morphy was born in New Orleans, La., June 22, 1837. At an early age he showed a strong disposition for games of skill, particularly chess, and at the age of 21 had encountered successfully the best amateurs of his native city. He first exhibited his ability to play blindfolded in the summer of 1858, playing 14 games with Lowenthal in London, in
which Morphy won nine, Lowenthal three, and two were drawn. Aug. 25, at the annual meeting of the British Chess Association at Birmingham, Morphy played eight games simultaneously without seeing the boards, winning six games and losing one, one being drawn. On his return to the United States he was admitted to the bar, and since then had resided and practiced his profession in New Orleans, with short intervals of residence in Richmond and Mobile.

THE ELECTRIC GIRL.
When the curtain rose at Wallack's Theatre last night, says the N. Y. Sun, the crowd saw Miss Lulu Hurst in a Black silk dress and a neat white ruffe caught at the throat with a large gold pin. Mr.
Atkinson invited enough gentlemen to come on the stage to fill the chairs. A number sufficient to fill them twice accepted the invitation, among them Harry Hill and Dr. James R. Taylor of Bellevue Hospital. The audience applauded mildly, and then a cheap cotton umbrella was handed to a round-headed man with a very thick neck.
The Wonder placed her hands vertically against the handle, with the thumb extended beside the fingers. In a moment the umbrella cut a variety of dices about the man's head, and then her hands slipped away from the handle and the motions ceased. Then the man tried it again. Both dodged the gyrating as well as they could, but when the man gave it up blood was flowing from a cut on his forehead. To a reporter he said as he puffed for breath and wiped away the blood: "I think it was muscle very cleverly handled." In the mean time the young woman was smilingly breaking the umbrella over the head of a man who filled out a light check suit in a way that showed the effects of muscular training.
This time she used her left hand with the fingers and the thumb extended. The applause was mixed with mild gibes.
When a cane was produced Harry Hill walked up to the young woman, while the people in the galleries, the dress circle, the parquet, and the boxes and the lobby rose up and howled. Mr. Hill endeavored to stand still. He was encouraged to do so by 500 men in one breath, but the young woman laughed hysterically, and made him skip around the stage in a way that would have done credit to a lad in his teens. After great exertion he caused the cane to slide across her open hand to the floor. When satisfied he wiped his brow with a very fine silk handkerchief and made a very short speech, but what he said was drowned in the roar of voices among the audience. McNab and De Mille of the Madison Square Theatre tried to hold the cane in one position, but could not succeed. Then the stalwart young man in a light check suit tried to get a billiard cue to slide across her open hand to the floor. The audience noticed that the Wonder kept her feet together, and did not change color in her face, but the stalwart young man braced his feet and grew very red before he succeeded in downing the cane. Half a dozen others followed with varying success.
After a five-minute interval a bald-headed young man, in a brown suit, held a common cane-seat chair with its back against his breast, his right hand firmly grasping the front of the seat and his left the left front leg. The Wonder placed her hands over his, the tips of her fingers only touching the wood of the chair. He tugged away with sweat on
