ADVERTISE IN THE HERALD

Ideals for Catholic Young Women

Addressing the students of St. Catherine's College in St. Paul, at Commencement, Bishop Lawler of Lead, South Dakota said in part: Had I not been aware of the high standing of the College of St. Catherine I should have been surprised at the excellent display of talent just witnessed, but knowing the record of this institution for proficiency and thoroughness, I was prepared for this delightful program. I had expected much of the members of the graduating class, but they have far surpassed my expectations.

At the outset I deem it timely to refer to the patriotism of the students of the College of St. Catherine. Worthy of the highest commendation are your war activities of which I have read with much satisfaction. In the midst of your studies you have not lost sight of your duty to your country. The example you have given in denying yourselves many things in order to be able to respond generously to your country's call, is an evidence, if evidence were needed, of your loyalty to the flag. You have shown that you are ready to bear war's burdens as heroically as your brothers who are fighting over there. The Serbian Fund—the Belgian Relief Campaign—the Red Cross Work—the War Stamp Movement—the Liberty Loan and all other national demands have been the beneficiaries of your patriotic devotion. You have taken advantage of the opportunities afforded you of performing service for your native land, mindful that the highest life is the life of service—service to fellowmen—service to country—service to God.

"The human is closest to the Divine when clothed in the livery of service." You who are left behind have a right to say as well as those who have gone to the front-line trenches: "We are serving our country." The time is at hand for active, intense, unselfish, unswerving loyalty to our beloved country which is calling for the devotion, self-sacrifice and heroism of all her sons and daughters. The country we love will brook no rival in our hearts. Ours should be singlehearted patriotism. It must be America first, America alone, America always. Though our man-power will be decreased in the great war we thank God that our woman-power will remain to cheer and to bless our country.

Words of mine are not required to extol the merits of your Alma Mater. By its fruits you shall know it. Its graduates need no apology. The College of St. Catherine, placed as it is on the approved list of colleges by the Association of American Universities, because it is thoroughly equipped for the work of higher education, is realizing the Catholic ideal of affording women the highest opportunities for self-development and self-improvement. That is as it should be. Has she not a right to the best education? Why should high intellectuality in women be considered a mark of abnormality? By equipping her with a liberal education the College of St. Catherine is reproducing on our soil one of the educational triumphs of the Church in other lands and in other days. Higher education has always been a cherished work of the Catholic Church. The great colleges and Universities of Europe from Oxford to Louvain are here. Those wonderful centers of light, those abundant sources of civilization, are gems in her diadem of glory. The College of St. Catherine is training women as they were trained in the ages of faith when the women who achieved distinction in the arts and sciences—in all the departments of higher learning were legion. It must not be forgotten, other centuries and other countries, as well as ours, witnessed women in the arena of intellect, battling for perfection and wresting academic honors from men. Women as well as men became giants of thought in those celebrated homes of learning. To provide such men and women, superior men and women who are able to lead in thought and in activity, has always been the mission of colleges and universities. We have a right to expect the young women who graduate from this institution to be leaders and exemplars—to be so possessed of mental attainments and womanly virtues as to bring from outsiders the expression of admiration: "What women these Catholics have," as centuries ago the lives of Christian women caused Libanius, the friend of Julian the Apostate, to exclaim: "What women these Christians have!"

Young ladies: I would have you cherish gratitude towards all those who have helped you to reach this gladsome day, and especially towards your devoted, self-sacrificing teachers who have nourished your minds and hearts with knowledge and religion. What can I say that will be worthy of them? Educators maintain that it is not the buildings, nor the equipment, nor the surroundings, nor the methods, but the teacher that is the school. Unquestionably the teacher is the most vital factor in the work of the school. It is the teacher and the system that give a distinctive character to an institution of learning. In virtue of this principle your Alma Mater is the ideal school, because it has the best system of education and the best teachers. In its system the physical nature, the intellectual nature, the moral nature, the religious nature—the whole human being is developed harmoniously. It stands for true and complete education. It includes all that any secular college gives and much more. It aims to fit its graduates for the different departments of human achievement, but it aims higher still. It has in view all human relationships both to the world around us and to the world beyond us. It attends to body and soul, earth and heaven, the emancipation from the bonds of ignorance, and the attainment of the supernatural destiny. And other things being equal its teachers are the best. The consecrated members of our teaching communities in whom intellectual power and religious fervor are united are the ideal teachers.

The labor not for the things that perish, but for the indestructible reward—the pearl of great price. The priests, the brothers, and the sisters in charge of our universities and colleges and academies and schools are not only actuated by the natural reasons which are incentives to labor with every human being, but they are also inspired by higher considerations. They are animated chiefly by the supernatural motive of consecrating themselves to the training of youth as a lifelong profession out of love for God. All their best energies are spent on their pupils. All the highest ambitions are centered in the classroom. In the bright morning of life they severed the fondest ties that bind human nature in order that all the love of their pure hearts might be in their noble calling. With them teaching is not used as a make-shift—as a stepping stone to other states in life; but it is followed as their chosen profession, as their cherished life-work, as their religious vocation. The results of their training eloquently tell us of their success. An incident from history will serve as an illustration of my thought. Phidias the famous sculptor of ancient Greece is said to have inserted his own likeness into one of his master-pieces so actually that it could not be effaced without destroying the whole statue. Ladies and gentlemen, need I remind you that there is many a Phidias in our schools and academies and colleges and universities—devotedly laboring for the realization of Christian ideals—prodding grander works than Grecian sculptor ever dreamed of? The Sisters of St. Joseph have been at work among you for years fashioning master-pieces in human conduct—building up Christian character—furnishing leaders and exemplars among women on whom they stamp indelibly the likeness of the Divine Sculptor, the supreme original of all goodness and truth and beauty—on whom they put the impress of their own beautiful lives—the impress of trust, gentleness, purest, noblest womanhood.

Not less admirable has been the Church's encouragement of the fine arts in the furtherance of individual culture. You who have received diplomas in the Normal Arts Department have specialized in the domain of Art. Art surrounds human existence with an atmosphere of charm and dignity. Undeniable is its value to a nation. Not her heroes but art made Greece immortal. Not the Duke of Wellington but Shakespeare is the glory of England. Dante, Michael Angelo, Raphael, Palestrina and countless others have made Italy the native land of the fine Arts—the home by excellence of man's expressions of the beautiful.

Christianity encouraged art from the beginning. No other institution has ever fostered art like the Catholic Church. She has been its highest inspirator and most generous patron. She turned Europe into a vast studio and transformed our forefathers into architects and sculptors and painters and musicians and poets and orators and artists such as the world had never seen. Her promotion of the fine arts is one of the most wonderful achievements in all history—a fact for which mankind owes a debt of deepest gratitude. The Church and Art have always worked together for human refinement, enlightenment and betterment. They were together in the catacombs of Rome when Christian art was in its cradle. They were together throughout those long and glorious centuries known as the Middle Ages, when Master-pieces were produced which have since been the admiration and the despair of human genius. And still today they are together in all her homes of study as we find them united here in this progressive college on the banks of the Mississippi.

The panorama of her artistic creations rises before us out of a glorious past. When we behold her sacred paintings like those of Fra Angelico, Raphael, Murillo, Rubens, Millet—all breathing the air of heaven; when we admire her celebrated cathedrals and churches of the world from St. Peter's in Rome to St. Paul in Minnesota—all pointing eloquently to the life beyond; when we stand before her inimitable statues so true to life that we would be inclined to command them to speak; when we hear the wondrous compositions of her Palestrinas, Rossinis, Gounods, all resonant with the harmonies of the better country; in presence of the vast array of her artistic wonders would we voice the feelings of gratitude that fill our hearts our tongues must halt for words and we can only mutter: "God bless Thee for it, Holy Church of Rome, God bless Thee for it!"

Young women, I congratulate you on having received your B. A. degrees. Your college course, which has introduced you to the society of the brightest minds of all the ages—the aristocracy of intellect, has endowed you with the power, the refinement, the breadth of vision, the range of knowledge, the culture of a liberal education. Your study of the humanities has developed, refined and enriched your minds. With such a training life will mean more to you than to the multitude. After having acquired a liberal education—after having laid the foundation of broad culture, you can apply yourselves to special subjects with greater profit and with a firmer grip. There is a practical side to education which should not be neglected, especially in our matter-of-fact age in which the struggle for a livelihood is so fierce and heartless. As true culture is not incompatible with specialization, I would advise you to pursue further studies with a definite object Suffered Great Agony. Pains in the Stomach For Over Three Years.

Mrs. Dorothy Clark, Kouchibouguac, N.B., writes: "For over three years I suffered great agony from pains in the stomach. I tried several remedies, but got no relief until a friend advised me to take Milburn's Lax-Liver Pills. I started with two vials, and before I had one quite used I found much relief. I continued until I used four vials, and they have completely cured me. That was fourteen months ago, and I have not had the slightest return since. The best praise I can give them is not enough." Most of the misery and ill-health that humanity is burdened with arise from disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels. If you are feeling out of sorts, have pains in the stomach, especially after eating, biliousness, headache, sour stomach, coated tongue, water brash, etc., you should take a few doses of Milburn's Lax-Liver Pills. You will be surprised how quickly they will fix you up.

before you, with the practical—the utilitarian directly in view. I believe it is Edison who said: "This one thing I know—electricity." Now a question. What one thing do you know that will enable you to support yourself and those who may be dependent on you in after years should you be thrown upon your own resources? You may now be in prosperity and be surrounded with every comfort, but will it always be thus? Hope as we may, there is a possibility that some day you may be required to turn your attention to self-support. There is more truth than poetry in the lines:

"We're up today on fortune's wheel,
And free from every sorrow;
But in the round of good and ill,
All may be changed tomorrow."
It is wise therefore, to ascertain the avocations for which you have a special liking and a natural aptitude and to develop your talents along those lines.

I wish you to be mindful of the privilege you enjoy in being the recipients of a convent education. To have pursued your studies in this college is a privilege which spells blessings for your after life. Whether you appreciate your good fortune or not, it is profoundly true that your convent training is an inestimable blessing which will tend to make you exemplars of all that is good and true and beautiful and sweet and pure and lovable in Catholic womanhood.

Mary Ovington, Jasper Ont writes:—"My mother had a badly 'prained arm. Nothing we used did her any good. Then father got Haggard's Yellow Oil and it cured mother's arm in a few days Price 25 cents."

HAD SEVERE PAINS IN SIDES AND BACK. HAD TO GO TO BED.
Women are the greatest sufferers from weak, lame and aching backs owing to the continual stooping, bending and lifting so necessary to perform their household duties.
Women should not despair even if they are troubled with severe pains in the side or back, and not able to attend to these duties, as all they need to do to make the back strong and well again is to stimulate the kidneys with Dean's Kidney Pills.
Mrs. John Simmons, Coleman, P.E.I., writes: "I feel it my duty to recommend Dean's Kidney Pills to any one having weak kidneys, as they have been of great help to me."
Some time ago my kidneys were so bad I had severe pains in my sides and back and it was impossible for me to stand straight. I then got so bad I had to go to bed, and was that way for a week. I sent for some Dean's Kidney Pills, and I took just about one box, and was able to get up and do my own work."
Dean's Kidney Pills are 50c. a box at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.
