BOLSHEVIST MAKERS.

There is a deal of talk in this city, and our supply of automobiles and open plumbers and all the luxuries we can live with suddenly cut off. I don't want millions to die in country. And worse still, run the of being one of these millions. wonder we are down on the Bolshevists.

Do I need to tell you any more definitely what I mean by a Bolshevist maker?

In that city there is a tremendous housing problem. Not only the tenements but all the apartment houses are overcrowded. The competition has sent rents up to a painful height. Arouses a Sense of Injustice.

Think how that man's tenancy of that house that he cannot possibly use, must bring home a sense of in-

Justice to the thousands who know about it.

I believe that decency and noblesse oblige, impose in men and women of wealth an obligation to use their wealth in a reasonable way.

I think the man or woman who uses his wealth arrogantly, futilely, foolishly, who buys his wife a $75,000 fur coat, or spends $100,000 on an entertainment, or boasts about having more cars or more space in his home than he can use, is a Bolshevist maker. And I think he is as much a menace to his country's welfare as the Bolshevist himself.

Liquor Returned

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—(By Canadian Press)—Liquor valued at approximately $200,000 has just been returned to John Dunston, at his restaurant, "Jack's" in the theatrical district, where it was seized more than two years ago by prohibition agents who smashed doors and partitions to get at the liquor stock in the cellar.

The liquor was returned under a court order on the ground that the seizure of big stock was irregular.

While the motor truck was being unloaded a crowd of more than 500 gathered around the entrance of the restaurant and now and then sent up a cheer as Mr. Dunston appeared at the door and greeted some special case of liquor with the manner of a friend meeting a friend.

Quadruple Rescue

Sailor's Gallant Sacrifice of His Life—Drowned After Saving Four Boys.

Grim determination in face of almost certain death for himself led a sailor to go three times to the rescue of six choir boys struggling in the freezing grip of an ice-broken pool. Twice he returned to the shore with a boy under each arm. Entering the water for the third time he never came back alive. The gallant rescuer was James Horton, of Water-street, Kingswinford. The boys who were drowned were Clifford Smith, of Alma-place, Dudley, Albert Parker, Heller-street, Dudley. The boys who were members of the choir of the Dudley Parish Church, had been sliding on the ice on a deep pond, known as Allport Pool. Suddenly the ice, only an inch thick, gave way. Hearing their cries for help, the sailor, who was passing by with a companion, jumped over a wall and dived into the hole in the ice. "I know I shall get cramp," he exclaimed to his friend as he first rushed to the aid of the boys, "but I must try to save them." He brought a boy up under each arm, and going down a second time again made a double rescue. For the third time he went under, but this time, probably exhausted by his previous exertions and the numbing effect of the icy water, he failed to rise. Further help was soon forthcoming, but unfortunately it was too late. Mr. Crump, a local builder, hadly improvised a raft. His son Sidney, assisted by members of the town council and the vicar of the parish, went out on the raft and recovered the sailor's body and that of one of the boys. Rescue work with the aid of motor headlights went on for several hours in the presence of a crowd of some thousands. Two of the four boys that were saved were taken to the Dudley Guest Hospital where they are making satisfactory progress.

Misunderstood

The well-known movie actress, Miss Agnes Ayres, now being featured in the new film play, "Borderland," tells the following delightful little anecdote of studio life.

The story of Robinson Crusoe was being filmed for the screen, and one of the actresses had brought her little son with her, a lad of eight, or thereabouts.

In order to while away the time of waiting, his mother had given him the book to read, and he soon became deeply engrossed in it.

Presently, however, he looked up and said, "Mother, was Robinson

Crusoe a juggler, or something like that?"

"Good gracious, no!" answered his mother; "whatever makes you think that?"

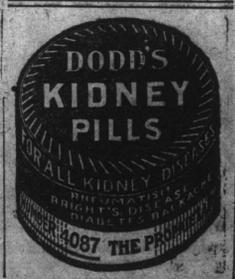

"Well," he replied, "it says in the book, 'and Robinson Crusoe thereupon sat down on his chest.'"

Health and Comfort in the Home.

Many a chill can be avoided by the wise use of heating with ever-ready gas stoves. An inset gas fire can easily be installed in any ordinary coal grate, and will provide the necessary warmth at any time.

Gas Fires make no work. There is no Coal to carry upstairs, and no ashes to be cleared away. They are ideal for use in dimly appointed rooms. There is no smoke or dust. They also ventilate the room. Enquiries solicited.
