dition of Sir Richard, Mr. Jaffray, Mr. Farrer and Mr. Goldwin Smith may be fair-ly treated as political topics. Everybody who has seen the Knight lately has remarked that he looks nearly as heartbroken as if he had, during the elections, drawn on his own bank account. The new stoop of his visage, the pallid lips, the deeper corrugations, all betoken how quickly he has aged since he played traitor to M. Blake. As for Mr. Jaffray, is he not more careworn, thinner and more constantly search-ing for a lost quarter on the pavement than was his wont before he undertook to boss the P. C. Hanson discovered and the loss is the bas aged since he played traitor to bo careworn, thinner and more constantly search-ing for a lost quarter on the pavement than was his wont before he undertook to boss the party which he had previously tried to as-sassinate? His down look and general air of decrepitude may possibly be the result of a morbid fear that some one will ask him to miscips to some public purpose, but facts are facts, and we are not required to specify all their causes. Mr. Farrer is "a swellin' Mr. Tony Weller's presence, and he looks as if he had not a care on his mind, but apo-plexy is poised over the neek of men who thus fatten by swallowing new sets of prin-tiples and getting rid of all they had for-merly nonfessed. Mr. Smith is still, as beciples and getting rid of all they had forciples and getting rid of all they had for-merly professed. Mr. Smith is still, as be-fore, in a condition which we could not at-tempt to describe except by reference to the haughty mummy of King Rameses II. The justification for these observations is precisely that which Oppositionist journals have for remarking on Sir John's com-plexion and figure, stoop, walk, wrinkles, viscera and alleged aliments. He, they say, is fair game because he is the leader of his party. It may be suggested that the plea confines us to remarks upon Mr. Laurier's confines us to remarks upon Mr. Laurier's state of health. But we have Bystander's authority for replying that Mr. Laurier is not a leader but a warming-pan. As the quartet mentioned have a strong hold of the handle they may be justly regarded as in handle they may be justly regarded as in control. Moreover, whatever intellectual ability may remain undiscovered in that bility may remain undiscovered in that treeable spouter, Mr. Wilfrid Laurier, it undeniable that the rank and file of s party regard him as farmers do the new reign dancing master. The Grit bosses are Many a parent knows how superlayed to its feeding infants with high-priced food. Now it is patent to all observers that Sir John has more vitality than the collective quartet and is likely to

Grits! Instead of the ideas of George Brown they are forced to back those of his mortal enemy Goldwin Smith, the only writer in Canada who ever jeered a foe scarcely cold and in his grave. For his brother Gordon they have the versatile individual who wrote ultramontane articles for L'Etendard with a calm conscience and "No Popery " articles for poor wandering Chris with the same equanimity. For BLAKE they have robert jaffray! For the Cartwright whose insolence and vanity totally damned the Government of Mr. Mackenzie and the Opposition of Mr. Blake, they have --Heaven help them!--the very same Cart-

Now then, what if these four were to die suddenly?—a proper question, if it be proper to enquire, as the Grits constantly do, what would happen if Sir John were to climb the golden stairs. Could the four be replaced? Is it convertished to the subtract of the subtract of Heaven forbid that The World should wish to see Sir Richard, the great bul-wark against Grit success, translated to another sphere. But fancy how sensible
