And then, forseoth, we talk of a charitable fund for the support of their widows! Our ministers serve us faithfully; they are our friends in "peril's darkest hour." Let us, therefore, pay them as well as we can; but if all that we can give its not all that we are due to the but that we can give is not all that we are due to them, let us pay the balance to their widows. If such conduct would be unjust to Mrs. B., is not similar conduct to the widows of our Clergy equally unjust? If each congregation, on the death of their Clergyman, were to pay to a common fund the amount of arrears due to him for his services, there would be no need to talk of charitable funds for the sup-port of our Clergymen's widows. The honorable and really noble plan would be to send an agent, whose business it should be to see them settled on the land..... The provincial government has no means to provide for the transportation of emigrants into the interior, and it is disgrace-ful to the aristocratic landlords of Great Britain and Ireland, that their tenantry should be thrown on the charity of the colonists.—Hamilton Journal, July 7. Still more extraordinary among the Highland emigrants were two lunatics—stark mad—who had not a single relative among their fellow-passengers, and were utterly dependent upon the hounty of these who were their superiors in but one respect.— These men were represented by those who knew them to have been insane for a number of years, and their shipment under about it .- Montreal Courier, July 6. INQUEST. — An Inquest was held on the 4th inst., by George Doggan, Esq., Coroner, and a Jury, on view of the body of one Matthew Stewart, who was drowned in the Bay while bathing, The deceased was seen in the water drowning by a person whe was passing by, who went immediately to the house, near at hand, of Larratt W. Smith, Esq., Barrister at Law, and informed him of the circumstance. Mr. Smith immediately repaired to the spot, stripped, and swam in, and with the assistance of the the servant boy brought the body ashore. It was conveyed to the hospital, but all exertions to restore animation failed. The Jury returned a verdict of "Accidental death by drowning." The humane and manly conduct of Mr. Smith is exceedingly praiseworthy, - Colonist.
