

His policy was to get refugees back to their villages as soon as possible in order that they could do the essential planting before the rainy season commenced. Also the provision of shelter and repair of buildings was a priority task.

The observers who visited the First Division area were told by the GSOL prior to their departure, that rebel soldiers were surrendering at Aqka in large numbers.