"Then why not pretend to be Edna when he comes?"

"By Jove!" I cried. "There's an idea!"

"But I couldn't possibly do it!" Joy objected.

Leah explained further. "Mr. Castle and I will teach you. We have all night before us, and we'll have to stay up, anyway, to make sure that it is you who meets the doctor. During that time you can learn your part. It will be hard work, but I know you can do it."

"It will at least keep us awake," Joy smiled at last.

"And then, early in the morning you as Edna, can telephone to him and ask him to come down."

"He'll come," I said. "He'll be only too glad to find that Edna has had two days running."

Joy began to enter into the humor of the situation. "I'll not have to make up for the part, at least, shall I? And Edna's costumes will fit me. But do you think I can really do it?"

"I was convinced that she could," I then you think that he will be predisposed to find you Edna, and how little cause he has to suspect such impersonation, and moreover how much more like you Edna is becoming, I think that there's very little risk, I said. "The best part of the plan is that after it's over the doctor is likely to go back and he'll be safely out of the way for my experiment."

"Oh, your experiment! How it terrifies me! What are we doing to that poor girl? What possible crime am I consenting to?" Joy broke down again.

Leah put her hand on Joy's arm and looked at her. "You'll do it for my sake, Miss Joy?" she pleaded. I knew that though she was not urging me to do a dangerous thing, she was desirous only of Joy's peace.

"But her words had their effect," I said for mine. "I saw fit to add the double appeal still Joy's protest."

"We began, therefore, to instruct Joy in her part, and I think that she learned more of her secondary self that night than she had known in all the rest of her life put together. It was not easy for her, at first, to abandon herself to the character, and assume the gaucherie that was typical of Edna. It was hardest of all to do what, indeed, I was loath to teach her, the little coquettish and familiarities which I imagined Edna to be in the habit of lavishing upon the doctor. But there was a humor, as well as a pathos, in the play, and occasionally the fun of it overthrew our seriousness."

So we went over and over the plot that night. Edna's languishing glances, Leah's awkward poses and active gestures, Edna's quick speech and obvious sallies, her impatient, pettish whims, all were rehearsed. Joy, becoming gradually interested in doing her best, threw herself into the attempt. Her mimicry of Edna was a strangely confusing sight—it was like one mirror reflected in another. I took the doctor's part, going through the motions of hypnotizing her, teaching her how to resist while simulating sleep, how to reply, how to awaken from the trance. I prepared her for every complication that I could think of, not forgetting Edna's character."

The Morning of Life

Make youth happy by making it strong. Help it to pass on to middle life, the vigor that commands success. Hard study at school and rapid growth weakens the system, and so it is necessary to develop a strong constitution early—one that prepares you to enter manhood and womanhood equipped for any work. GI is especially need to build up vigor for the strain, wear and tear of life.

Then build up by taking Ferronose; it is the very essence of health, and producer of vitality, that gives strength and mental clearness.

Ferronose clears the skin by purifying the blood, and gives you color by making the blood rich and red. It not only removes nervousness, but builds up the nerves, too. It gives buoyant good health and the feeling of strength and vigor, nothing gives such lasting results as Ferronose. Every sickly child, every boy and girl, in fact any persons in failing health, it will rebuild and restore. Sold at all dealers.

I had to stay from ten till two o'clock before I saw the carriage go back with its passenger. That wait had been long, but it was not so anxious a time as I had spent before, for I knew that Joy would be quite able to cope with the situation. But I was relieved to see the carriage go back, and left the cabin the moment the vehicle was out of sight.

I had gone only half-way up the lane when I saw Joy coming to meet me. She looked tired and pale. She ran to my arms and kissed me. "Oh, he's infamous!" she cried. "I never would have believed it of him!"

"He didn't suspect you, then?" I asked anxiously.

"Suspect? No, he was too busy with his own machinations for that. Chester, if you had been there, I think you would have killed him! And I acted—how I acted! I got more and more in a rage, and I led him on with every bit of cunning I had till I had found out his worst. Oh, it was vile!"

"I tried to hide my own rising fury. 'What happened?' I demanded."

"Oh, I can't tell you! Let me try to forget it! He did everything that we have suspected, and more! I let him borrow money of me—I permitted his familiarities and his vulgarly as long as I could endure it—I listened to all his schemes. Why, Chester, d'you know, he is trying to destroy me, and make her take my place permanently? He hasn't a scrap! He's after my money, and worst of all, after me! It's incredible. Oh, if you can't outwit him, I'm lost."

"There's only one sure way, now, to foil him, Joy. You must marry me this afternoon!"

"I thought of that, too," she said, "and I think I'm ready. This forenoon has opened my eyes to the danger. If you say so, we'll go over to the Harbor. Oh, Chester, can you really marry such a mutilated, enslaved person as I am?"

"I am going to free you," I said, still holding her close.

"And Edna?" she broke away to look at me fearfully. "What will you do with Edna?"

"Tomorrow there will, I hope, no longer be such a person."

"Then shan't we wait till tomorrow?"

"You forget," I said, "that, at his first opportunity, it is possible for him to marry her! The risk is too great."

"That settles it—come to the house and we'll get Leah!"

My hopes reached to the skies, then and I was sure that I could conquer anything and everything that stood between me and the fulfillment of my rescue. With the surrender, she, too, gave herself up completely to the occasion. We took hands and raced up the lane like two children. In that moment I got a fresh glimpse of what sort of a person Joy really was, when she was free. Edna's gauntness was not more gay and abandoned, Edna's laugh never rang out more merrily. When we burst into the house I think that Leah, for a moment, thought we had both gone mad.

We did not even wait for Uncle Jerdon to return with the carriage. I went out to see that my motor car was in order, while Joy, laughing with Leah so gaily that I could hear them even from the stable, prepared for the trip.

Joy threw up her window, to call out: "Chester, I want that little chain Edna gave you! I must have something old and something new, something borrowed, something blue!" I knew, then, that the last trace of feeling at that incident had disappeared.

She came down all in white—hat, veil, gown, gloves, stockings, shoes, parasol, Leah too, was dressed for the occasion, modestly, as usual; for though she could well have carried off a modish toilet, she always shrank from being in the least conspicuous, as if fearing to compromise Joy by appearing to assume a social equality. She was in a frock of ecru linen, just severe enough in its trim design to keep her place with Joy's bewitching laces and flounces and chiffon. I myself made a sorry-looking bridegroom, I fear, for I had found something to do under the belly of my machine, and the employment did the only costume I had little good. So, bidding King goodbye, we were off with enthusiasm. Even Leah had caught the infection of our high spirits—for a moment the tension had been let down all along the line. Leah had, indeed, much reason to be happy. She had implicit confidence in my ability to frustrate the doctor's plans, she saw herself now safe with Joy, she anticipated for her mistress a new beatitude. Under the influence of this I noticed that she lapsed, for the first time in my experience, partly into a negro dialect. It was the more remarkable and significant because I had seen her under the stress of fear and horror, and neither had affected her speech. It showed me how rare perfect happiness had been in her life, that this glint of joy should burst the bonds of her speech and unloose the tongue of her girlhood. Both Joy and I laughed freely at her, and she herself laughed with us.

GRAND DISPLAY OF BRITISH NAVY

Autumn Maneuvers Begin on October 14—Three Immense
Fleets Take Part.

London, Sept. 30.—Under command of Lord Charles Beresford, the combined Home, Atlantic and Channel fleets, will leave Portland about Oct. 14 for the autumn maneuvers, which are being conducted in the North Sea this year.

The greatest interest is being taken in this gathering of England's first line of defense, for while the usual fleet maneuvers and exercises will be carried out the main object, it is believed, is strategic, to teach the officers what the admiralty would expect of them in case of war with Germany. The programme is being kept a strict secret and journalists will not be invited to accompany the fleet.

The naval attaches have not been given any information and will not be present, except the Japanese, who, as England's allies, have in recent years been the guests of the officers in command on occasions of the kind.

The meeting of the fleets will be accompanied by nine admirals and so many officers is also to be taken if Cromarty on Moray Firth as a place of anchorage for big ships and its eventual adoption as an auxiliary naval base to that being developed at Rosyth on the Firth of Forth.

CHARGED TO JAPANESE

Complaint That Schooner Pillaged an Alaskan Village.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 30.—A report has been made to United States Consul Smith, of Vancouver, by Captain Munro, of the Schooner Case, of the alleged pillaging of the Alaskan village on Litak Bay, southwest of Kodiak Island, by the crew of a Japanese sailing schooner operating in Behring Sea this season.

The Case called at Litak Bay for water, and the Russian priests asked Captain Munro to inform the United States authorities of the outrage. The Japanese landed from the schooner, broke open houses and looted right and left. All manner of things were dragged from the houses.

Another report was received that the Japanese sealers had landed on Shetkoff Island and killed cattle running on ranges there.

Advertiser Patterns

DESIGNED BY MARTHA DEAN.

A SEASONABLE DRESS FOR THE SMALL MAIDEN. (4253.)

Frocks of woolen material will be in order for some months to come for the small maid who requires warmth in her clothing, and the design here represented is one that will be welcomed. It is both stylish and practical—two desirable qualities that do not invariably fasten in the back, but a front closing is prettily simulated in a turreted effect, buttons assisting the illusion. Box-pleats in front and back dispose the fullness becomingly, and the blouse is gathered at the waist-line, where it is attached to the straight skirt. Clear-colored cashmere was used for making the frock and fancy braid for trimming, but nun's veiling, challis or any soft novelty woolen would do for development, the 8-year size requiring 4 yards 27 inches wide.

4253—8 sizes, 5 to 12 years.

The price of this pattern is 10 cents.
