STRATFORD MAN SHOWING
MANY RARE OLD BOOKS

Exhibition at the Public Library is of Universal Interest.

Through the kindness of Mr. J. Davis Barnett of Stratford, there are now on exhibition in the public library some of the finest specimens of early printing that have ever been seen in this city. The books, which are more than 400 years old, will find beautiful specimens of the art of the famous printers in the exhibition.

The earliest book in the collection is from the press of Peter Schoeffer, printed at Mayence in 1474. As in all incunabula proper it has no title page, but the initial paragraph, printed in red, reads as follows: "A golden mirror for observation of the ten commandments of God in the form of sermons for the instruction of confessors and preachers." The book is bound in the most beautiful manner, and is not by ink and pen, but by metal or gold, at the noble city of the most glorious God, before all nations of the earth preferred to elude the ingenious art of printing. A.D. 1474, September 28.

The largest volume on exhibition is a copy of the Decretals of Gregory IX, in Latin, in Gothic script, with painted initials and a beautiful miniature illuminated portrait of Gregory IX, on the first leaf. It is in contemporary monastic binding, and was printed by M. Wendt at Basel in 1478. The Decretals in large type occupy the greater part of the page, while the commentary in smaller type, surrounds it. The capital letters are hand written in red ink. This book was probably chained at one time to preserve it from being stolen.

A second copy of the Decretals, printed by Nicolaus Kessler at Basel in 1487, was apparently at one time in the English Carthusian monastery at Shene, in Wiltshire, England. It was probably lost when that monastery was dispersed by Henry VIII. Three manuscript copies of this book are known, but the earliest edition in the British Museum is that printed at Leyden in 1519.

A third copy of the Decretals bears the date 1514, and is of special interest because of its embellishment by neat open line woodcuts, very early examples of illustration for a book. The text is in Gothic, red and black ink, and the illustrations are in the same style, that of the Decretals being in larger type in the centre of the page with commentary surrounding.

TELLS WOMEN HOW MILITARY Y. M. C. A. IS HELPING TROOPS

Large Audience at Meeting of Canadian Club.

REAL NATIONAL SERVICE

Capt. Cameron Loud in Praise of the Work Being Done.

The large attendance at the Women's Canadian Club on Tuesday showed that the women of London were eager to hear Capt. Cameron's message about the overseas work of the Y. M. C. A. As Mrs. McLean, the president, remarked in introducing Capt. Cameron, "although the men hold the purse-strings, it is the women who are the power behind the throne," and they were there to hear the appeal in big numbers.

The speaker's subject was the challenge of the men who serve overseas to the people who serve at home. He spoke of Canadian heroes, who, but boys of 18 here, became men as they faced the responsibilities over there. "They were not dear when the spirit called, but went to work in hurricane and fire on the very edge of the world. They took one stride forward into manhood, and attained what some of us have sought after for years. The boys have become big by doing big things. So the Y. M. C. A. Before the war, the Y. M. C. A. was a place of molly-coddles. It was not the same here, however, nor in the United States, for on this side of the water it had reached out to a broader understanding. Then, when the time of testing came, the war broke out, and images of clay went to the ground, and there emerged forces which were to tide over the storm. Among these was the Y. M. C. A. It has simply found its soul among the troops of Canada in England, and on the firing line in France.

Opposed to Canteens.
 "Now the Y. M. C. A. is spending $1,000 a month in England on canteens alone. These are in opposition to the canteens of the British army. For the life of modern soldiers, why have we wet canteens in the camps of British soldiers? We are on our knees at the very time when the wet canteens open, and I can say that we have succeeded in putting those institutions pretty well out of business. Just recently $60,000 was cable to the Y. M. C. A. for the purpose of erecting a hut in London to serve as a home for colonial soldiers on leave. Now there is no institution standing between the boys and the immoral forces which are at work in that city.

Capt. Cameron divided the challenge of the boys to the people at home into three different phases. First, the challenge of the past was the challenge of those who have died. "They go forward into the time to come as true kings, and their empire is in every heart. I am not asking you to mourn their loss. I am asking you to make your thinking, then saying, and then doing, show that you remember them. The challenge of the present is the challenge of the men on the battlefield—their spirit of cheerfulness, and in the development of this spirit, the most powerful ally on the field today is the Y. M. C. A.

National Service.
 "This institution is rendering a national service, to which the Canadian Government has given official recognition, and which deserves the support of the nation. The challenge of the future refers to that time between the close of the war and the arrival of the troops on Canadian soil, the time when the restrictions of the war will be lifted, and the time when the wildest sort of license. Then is the time when the Y. M. C. A. must bring to bear on them the most powerful influences.

"If you could have seen the boys on Vimy Ridge you would not have thought that they have lost any of the virility which has made Britain mistress of the seas. There is no nation under the sun which confronts a more glorious future than Canada, providing that we understand that it is righteousness, which exalts a nation, and if by our work you can influence the boys.

Did Great Work.
 "While I have been thrilled watching these fellows fighting Vimy Ridge, I am asking you to realize that the Canadians have accomplished this last winter—I've said to myself, 'I wonder what the secret of their indomitable spirit?' And I can only answer—there are many influences at work under their feet, and lifting them up, and chief among these is the Y. M. C. A. After the battle is over this institution will be on the job, bringing them safely back to the Canada that is to be. Will you forget the Y. M. C. A.?" As a direct result of Capt. Cameron's appeal, the Women's Canadian Club, at the instigation of the president, voted $100 to the Y. M. C. A.

THANKS MOTHERS FOR HELPING SOLDIERS AT BYRON SANATORIUM

Dr. Craig Addresses Large Audience on "Tuberculosis." ELECTION OF OFFICERS

Both St. George's and Tecumseh Schools Held Sessions Last Evening.

The meeting of the St. George's Mothers' Club was largely attended last evening by citizens of the North End, who were specially attracted by the chief program feature, an address on "Tuberculosis" by Dr. Craig, superintendent of the Byron Sanatorium. The speaker introduced the subject by the reassuring statement that tuberculosis is not hereditary. Two classes of cases were mentioned, and closed, the open class giving out infection through the sputum, while in the case of the closed class, the germ is not in the sputum. The open class, in consequence, is the real menace to public health.

The Preventorium.
 Reference was made to the preventorium where children are treated who have contracted tuberculosis. In cases where they are children of tuberculous parents, the doctor stated the disease has not been inherited, but that there is a predisposition to it owing to constitutional weakness. Speaking at some length concerning the new wing of the sanatorium for tuberculous soldiers, Dr. Craig declared too much could not be done for these men and thanked the St. George's Mothers' Club for the interest shown in the soldiers' wing, and a generous donation made towards it. More than 400 soldiers have been treated at the preventorium, he added, and the prospects are that all will recover. Further, the new wing of the preventorium is completed. It will be one of the best in the country.

Answers Questions.
 Several questions were directed to the speaker at the close of his address. One member of the audience wanted to know why a family of children whose parents were not tuberculous should be sufferers from tubercular affection of the joints. The reply was that probably the children had weak constitutions and were exposed to the same contagion which affected the spot of least resistance.

"Is it safe for children to live in a house in which their parents have died of tuberculosis?" was another question. "It is possible for the children to contract the disease," Dr. Craig replied, "but if the house is properly disinfected, the house after nine days, after which period it will be safe for anyone. Soap and water and sunshine are the best disinfectants."

Election of Officers.
 The election of officers for the coming year, the chief business of the evening, resulted as follows:
 Honorary president, Mrs. W. A. Tanner; president, Mrs. J. A. Cole; first vice-president, Mrs. J. A. Cole; second vice-president, Mrs. T. Sumner; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. T. Benson; assistant secretary, Mrs. R. Day; secretary, Mrs. J. Rose.
 The retiring president, Mrs. Rose, occupied the chair, excepting during the election of officers, when Miss Edith Ferguson ably presided. Solos by Mrs. McLean were a bright feature of the program.

The St. George's Mothers' Club has voted $10 to the Byron Sanatorium for Tuberculous Soldiers; $10 to the Children's Aid Society, and $9 to Y. M. C. A. Overseas Fund.
At Tecumseh School.
 The election of officers for the coming year was an important item of business of the regular meeting last evening of the Tecumseh School Mothers' Club, Mrs. A. E. Tutt, secretary of the Union Mothers' Club, presiding during the evening. The following were appointed: President, Mrs. T. Lowes; vice-president, Mrs. Brighton (the former president); secretary-treasurer, Mrs. March; press reporter, Mrs. Wilson; pianist, Miss Fenton; lookout and visiting committee, with power to add, Mrs. Heath and Mrs. Cooper; social committee, Mrs. Geo. Tapscott; Mrs. Dickinson; reception committee, Mrs. Knowles and Mrs. Jackson.

School Picnic.
 Arrangement was made for co-operation with the teachers of the school in preparing for the school picnic and the executive named a committee to confer with the teachers.

An address was delivered by Miss Isabel Armstrong on "Citizenship for Women and Food Conservation," and an amusing recitation given by Miss Elsa Pourie.

CONFERENCE ON CHURCH ADVERTISING
 Members of the London Advertising Club are being urged to take local ministers of the gospel into the ranks of the convention of businessmen at St. Louis, June 3 to 7, under the auspices of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, for there will be a conference on church advertising to which all ministers are invited. In the case with businessmen and all others, local advertising men explain, it is not necessary to be a member of an advertising club to attend the sessions. The Conference on Church Advertising will be the second in the history of the advertising clubs. The first, at the annual meeting in Philadelphia, last year, was attended, and ministers from many sections of the country told how paid advertising space had made the church more useful by bringing more people to the services. While the monetary side of the matter is not especially stressed by the advertising persons of the country, it is especially interesting to note, those who attended the Philadelphia meeting say, that the increase in collections as the result of bigger attendance at services (and especially the evening service) pays for the advertising and more. Dr. Christian F. Reider of the Grace M. E. Church, New York City, at the head of the Conference on Church Advertising, who is an authority on the subject, says the slogan of the convention, "Advertising Lowers Cost of Distribution." Its into the church, through advertising, can extend its benefits to more people. It does so without increasing its investment in real estate, its light or heat bills, the expense. It simply distributes its service over a bigger field, and gets its message into the hearts of more people, at the same old cost for "fixed charges."

WAS KINCARDINE BOY.
 KINCARDINE, May 15.—Pte. Wm. Collins, a former Kincardine boy who enlisted at Calgary, is in the list of killed in France on the 14th inst. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Collins, former residents of this town, now of Vancouver. He was a member of the Bank of Commerce staff at Calgary when he enlisted.

Laying the Foundation of the Artistic Room
 With a Rug that is right in color and type, right in size, style and weave, for the particular type of room in which you wish it to serve. Hence, by way of suggestion these few artistic varieties from our superb showing of new floor coverings.

MANY A WOMAN at this house-cleaning season of the year rises up to bless the vogue of the rug, and the hardwood floor. Unhappy are the memories that linger of the utter disarray into which a room was cast by the pulling up of carpets for their annual beating, and of the troublesome operation of stretching and tacking them down again. The rug or square, which may be removed to the backyard once a week for a thorough sweeping, is one of the real boons of modern housekeeping.

In the case of the old eastern rug this quality of being easily rolled up and carried away was pre-eminent. The oriental and his rug were inseparable. The merchant spread it out in the bazaar, and set his wares upon it—it was his place of business. The pilgrim journeying to Mecca threw his rug on the ground when he knelt to pray—it was his place of worship. The householder hung his choicest rug on his wall—it was to him a thing of beauty, to admire as we admire a picture.

When rugs first came to England they were not employed as floor coverings. Straw, sand or dried rushes served in that capacity. The rugs were used as handsome coverings for beds or tables. Thus arose the familiar expression, "on the carpet," inferring some question laid upon the table for discussion.

When the idea was first launched of laying carpets on the floor, Milady's boudoir was regarded as the only room worthy of such a luxury.

The European industry of rug weaving originated in France. King Henry IV established a factory at the Louvre in 1607. When the Edict of Nantes was revoked in 1685, many of the weavers fled across the channel. Thus carpet-making was established in England.

TWO MORE FROM INGERSOLL.
 INGERSOLL, May 15.—The names of two more Ingersoll soldiers have been included in the casualty list. They are: Pte. Wm. K. Wright, who was born and spent all his life up to the time of his enlistment in Ingersoll. Word was received by relatives here that he was wounded and admitted to General Hospital No. 30, at Calais, on May 4. The particulars given were that he had received a gunshot wound in the chest. Pte. Wright enlisted here with the 168th Battalion.

THE LAKE OF BAYS.
 This incomparable region reached through Huntsville, Ont., offers unlimited attractions to the tourist and summer home-seeker. Visitors to the district will be glad to learn that the Wawa will open for the season on the 26th of June, and this year's attendance promises to be as large as ever. Boating, bathing, tennis, bowling on the green and golf are some of the attractions. Two golf links are within easy distance of the hotel. Booklets on the Lake of Bays, telling you all about it, can be had free on application to C. E. Horning, Union Station, Toronto.

For good service, good looks and small price in a bedroom rug, look among the Brussels squares. You will find, for instance, this nice two-tone conventional pattern shown in the drawing. It may be had in fawn, in light blue, grey, rose and green, in this wide range of sizes:

6 ft. 9 in. by 7 ft. 6 in. $13.00 up
 6 ft. 9 in. by 9 ft. $15.00 up
 9 ft. by 9 ft. $20.00 up
 9 ft. by 10 ft. 6 in. $24.00 up
 9 ft. by 12 ft. $28.00 up

LIVING-ROOM AND HALL

There is little doubt, it is there, as to which is the happiest rug to choose for a hall or living-room. One of the bold-patterned, bright-colored Oriental carpets is always so wholly satisfying in this particular capacity. And it withstands so well the inevitable wear and tear, that its purchase is true economy. This design shown here is a Kazak, in a rich-toned medley of red, blue and old ivory tones. Other Kazaks in similar tones, also in beautifully soft combinations of tan, mahogany, and coppery tints, may be had in these sizes:

6 ft. 9 in. by 9 ft. $25.00 up
 9 ft. by 9 ft. $30.00 up
 9 ft. by 11 ft. 6 in. $39.00 up
 11 ft. 3 in. by 12 ft. $55.00 up
 11 ft. 3 in. by 13 ft. 6 in. $62.00 up
 11 ft. 4 in. by 15 ft. $69.00 up

DINING-ROOM

"A well-covered rug for a dining-room"—tis generally a good rule to follow, especially for a dining-room that's in constant use. That pleasing effect is well in line with the rule, see proven before you in this rug, stretching out below. It is another of the late English Wilton squares, close of weave, and velvety of surface, the design having just the merest suggestion of the fashionable, Chinese influence in its make-up. This shows itself in the pale pink cherry blossoms that pattern the tan ground, the borders and medallions being wrought out in deep blue, rose and ivory. The prices at which this and other designs may be had are as follows:

6 ft. 9 in. by 9 ft. $25.00 up
 9 ft. by 9 ft. $30.00 up
