AFTERNOON COSTUME OF BRONZE BROADCLOTH

Brown is once more at the head of the fashionable color list and is being much worn by the ultra smart women of both Paris and New York in dressy costumes, the shade having not yet reached popularity for ready-made garments. This dress is of a bronze cloth and has a braided motif in self-color on coat and skirt. Collar and cuffs of old gold velvet, and the bodice is of a graceful, full model in the marquis style—of bronze velvet with a fan rocade and sweeping plume in a shade lighter brown tone.

The New Commandment
By Anthony Verrall.

Great hunger had no compunction. Judith had passed the stages of delicate demands; she was famished for food; she was savage with the need to eat. Her thoughts ran swiftly to fire with which to cook. She had no matches; she knew nothing of the manner of making a spark with flint and steel, and possessed neither the one nor the other of these two requisites, no matter how much she might have known of their employment.

Suddenly confronted with this new dilemma, she underwent her first deep-dreaded alarm. Fire would be absolutely essential to her existence today, tomorrow, and every day to come. A reactionary despair urged through her veins almost instantly. She would have both fire and food, and then with sharp intention she would revert to savagery, but she would not die.

In the purely animal mood that possessed her she took up the snake by the tail and carried it away to her cave. There she laid a heavy rock upon its ugly head, and then with sharp intention she would revert to savagery, but she would not die.

cord, but he realized at once that the price was unobtainable.

He puzzled his brain for an hour. Dejection came upon him. Failure mocked him at the height of his hopes. Then, like Judith, remembered the portion of the wrecked balloon, below on the desert by the cactus plants, and dropped all employment to hasten to secure what remained of the cordage.

He was on his way down when he and Judith passed in the lower reaches of the greenery. She was at the farther edge of the growth as he hastened downward on his way. They beheld each other, but he exchanged no sign with her before then. Not even Judith's plunger was noticed by him. He knew she had been there before. When at length he came upon the battered car he knew she had been there before. When at length he came upon the battered car he knew she had been there before.

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 28—The Utah, the largest battle ship in the navy, gracefully slid from the ways at the New York shipbuilding plant in Camden, dipping her stern in the ice fringed along the shore and throwing the particles high in the air, as though in acknowledgement of her patriotic sponsor, Miss Mary Alice Spry, of Salt Lake City.

Long before the time set for the launching, hundreds of employees and their families had gathered beneath the covered ways, while scores of dignitaries took up vantage points at the bow of the giant

KELLEY IS ARRAIGNED IN PORTLAND

His Counsel Says Case Will Be Made International Affair—Customs Man Testifies

Portland, Me., Dec. 28—William J. Kelley, of the parish of Richmond, Carleton county (N. B.), who is under eight indictments found by the December term of the grand jury of the United States District Court, three of which charge assault on federal officers and five for smuggling, was brought to trial today on the one indictment charging him with an assault on Deputy-Collector Frank W. Burns, at Ludgson (Me.) on the night of April 17, 1902.

In this indictment Kelley pleaded "not guilty" when he was arraigned. Kelley was represented by F. B. Carvell, K. C. of Woodstock (N. B.), and by Judge Enoch T. Foster, of this city, one of the most brilliant and able members of the Maine bar, who is especially noted for his searching cross-examinations and keen sarcasm.

Although it is the contention of Kelley's counsel that their client was kidnapped in order to get him within the jurisdiction of the United States government, yet little of this could be brought out in the present trial, which does not refer to the indictment covering the time of Kelley's arrest. Nevertheless, Judge Foster, in his cross-examination of special collector William M. Jenks, of the United States District Court, in several questions in an attempt to draw Mr. Jenks into the admission that when the officers arrested Kelley on Nov. 15 they had been sent specially after the Richmond man and not after any smugglers that might come along, as they had claimed unofficially.

When it came to further questions on this point, District Attorney Whitehouse objected, saying, "The case now, and Judge Foster dramatically replied: "No sir, you are right, the other cases will be tried by the partition of Canada and the United States government." Thus giving the first tangible evidence of his purpose in drawing out Collector Jenks.

The star witness was Burns himself, a grey-haired man of sixty, who is deaf in his right ear and walked with a cane, and these infirmities are said to be due to his terrible fight with Kelley seven years ago. He told in a dramatic way the story of the alleged assault, which Kelley claims was in self-defence. How he had held up Kelley as he was driving a load of potatoes, how Kelley pulled out a club and made a pass at him and whipped up his horses, and when he had stopped the horses, Kelley picked up the club again and jumped at him.

Burns says he fired his revolver as Kelley jumped down with upraised club and he was struck down by a blow on the head. That the shot and blow were simultaneous was practically Burns' claim. He hadn't intended to fire there, but his revolver was a double-action one. He was knocked unconscious by Kelley's next blow.

It was about 10 p. m. when this fight took place and three hours later he woke up in a ploughed field nearby and finally crawled to a farm house about 1200 feet away.

Dr. Harry L. Putnam, of Hartford, testified that he took Kelley to the hospital, and the wounds on Burns' head and face, and that three ribs and his left arm were broken.

Thomas H. Phair, at that time collector of customs, was also a witness.

A QUARTER MILLION FROM C.P.R. FOR THE SELKIRK CENTENNIAL

According to the Winnipeg newspapers Sir Thomas Shaughnessy has promised a contribution of $250,000 from the C. P. R. for the Selkirk centennial, providing the other railways assist proportionately. Mr. Hays, of the G. T. H., it is also stated, said that his company would give as generous a contribution as that of any other railway company, provided the fair was postponed to a date when it would be possible for the Grand Trunk Pacific to participate in the business which the fair would create. The Canadian Northern also promised co-operation and assistance if the fair was delayed at least a year. Contributions are also expected from other transportation companies doing business in Canada.

BRITISH NAVY WIRELESS PLANS ARE STOLEN

London Dec. 28—The wholesale theft of wireless plans, models and sketches, which in the hands of an expert would reveal all the workings and innermost secrets of the wireless service of the British navy, is charged against Richard Knowlden, who was placed on trial at Portsmouth today. Knowlden is a draughtsman attached to the torpedo schoolship Vernon. In his room were found not only the plans and sketches, but also a number of books of the most confidential character which were issued to officers only.

The authorities attach the greatest importance to the arrest of the accused man, as they contend that if the documents abstracted from the Vernon had reached foreign governments, all the labor of recent years given to the perfection of a wireless system for the British navy, would have been rendered practically fruitless.

CHIMES OF NORMANDY WELL PRESENTED

That the Chimes of Normandy with its bright, catchy music and numbers has lost none of its charm in the range of light operas was demonstrated last evening by the large audience which heard the Robinson Opera Company sing this popular composition in the Opera House. Under the general direction of Frank D. Nelson the opera was well staged and sung. Mr. Nelson, as Henri, Marquis of Cornouille, had an excellent chance to display the tone quality of his rich baritone voice and his numbers both in solo, in duet with Miss Nola as Germaine, were especially well rendered. Miss Nola added to her popularity in the leading soprano role while Miss Barton sang well and infused the character of Serpentine with the necessary spirit of malicious mischief. Mr. Fulton, the company's new tenor, was heard to advantage as Dan Greenchux, the forwardly fisherman. His solo in the first act was one of the best efforts of the evening. Jack Henderson, a tenor, and altogether the production was one of the best which the company have yet given.

Tonight the company will play Bess's famous grand opera, Carmen, with Miss Lucia Nola in the title role. The cast is as follows: Ekanillo, a Trovatore. Frank D. Nelson, Don Jose, a Brigadier. Charles Fulton Zunigo, a Captain. Charles Hillman Lt. Dancairo. Arthur Danvo Lt. Remendado. John Henderson Lillas Pastra. A. E. Vernon Michaela, a peasant girl. Minna Storm Fracotta. Marie Fida Mercedes. Ethel Barton Carmen. Miss Lucia Nola in the part of Carmen, it is said, leaves nothing to be desired and as Mr. Nelson has been heard in this opera before in St. John he will, no doubt, play part with his usual success. Minna Storm, one of the company, will sing the soprano role.

THE GERMAN NAVY

(From the Kolnische Zeitung.)

The personnel of the German navy will next year be increased by 3,500 men, inclusive of officers and engineers. The total strength of the navy in round numbers will then be 57,800 men. The number of officers will be increased by 100 to approximately 1,800, and the engineers by forty to a total of about 400. An addition of 3,000 men is to be made to the crew and the dockyard and torpedo divisions. The total strength of the navy, which had been increased by only 15,000 men in the forty years previous to 1888, will have reached in 1910 almost four times the number it counted at the accession of Kaiser Wilhelm II. The new ships to be laid down in 1910 will not exceed the provisions of the naval programme of 1900.
