

BRITISH NEWS.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—May 7. Their Lordships met at five o'clock, and after the presentation of several petitions, the house resolved itself into a committee on the reform bill.

Lord Grey rose and spoke to the following effect: My Lords, the first motion to be made in the Committee is that the title of the bill be postponed.

The Duke of Newcastle said, he would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement. He would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement.

Lord Brougham said, he would support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement. He would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement.

Lord Lyndhurst said, he would support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement. He would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement.

Lord Lyndhurst's argument was to prevent any disfranchisement, and he had no doubt that the greatest number of those who were for postponing the clause, did so because they either thought they would thereby get rid of disfranchisement, or they would maintain and mutilate the bill.

The Duke of Newcastle said, he would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement. He would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement.

Lord Brougham said, he would support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement. He would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement.

Lord Lyndhurst said, he would support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement. He would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement.

Lord Lyndhurst said, he would support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement. He would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement.

Yesterday being the anniversary of the taking of Seringapatam, the King gave a grand dinner to the Directors of the East India Company, Cabinet Ministers, Officers of State, and a large number of Noblemen and Gentlemen, who have held distinguished offices, civil and military, in India.

The Russian ratifications of the treaty of the 15th November with Belgium, were exchanged at the Foreign Office last night. It is accompanied with a protest, on the part of Russia, against any violent intervention to compel the acceptance by Holland.

The late ratifications have not produced any relaxation of the military preparations in Holland. The money market is somewhat quiet, and the Bank Directors do not seem to be in a hurry to reduce the rate of discount.

The Duke of Newcastle said, he would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement. He would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement.

Lord Lyndhurst said, he would support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement. He would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement.

From the Liverpool Courier, May 9. The Cholera.—The returns from the various Boards of Health to the Council-office, London, on Saturday, present only two cases in the metropolis; there had been 3 recoveries, but no deaths, and the total number of cases remaining was 17.

The French capital which has been the scene of an extraordinary mortality, was according to the last accounts, beginning to experience considerable diminution in the number of deaths, which leads us to hope that the pestilence had spent its strength, and that the health of the city would be speedily restored.

A gentleman just returned from Paris, where he resided during the hottest of the eruption of cholera, has given us the following illustration of its ravages:—A person of his acquaintance kept a lodging-house, entering the care of attendance, as is the custom in Paris, to maintain an order of cleanliness in the tenants.

The Duke of Newcastle said, he would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement. He would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement.

Lord Lyndhurst said, he would support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement. He would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement.

Manufactures of Leeds, Wakefield, Bradford, Halifax, Luddersfield, and places adjacent, comprise broad and narrow cloths of all qualities, shalloons, calimancoes, and Huddersfield, with every kind of woollen goods, from Sheffield, cutlery, and plated goods, are exported to all parts of the world.

The English Mail for May arrived here on Saturday evening, bringing London dates to the 6th of the month. It has furnished us with the most interesting news of the day, and we are enabled to give you a more complete account of the events of the week.

The Duke of Newcastle said, he would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement. He would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement.

Lord Lyndhurst said, he would support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement. He would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement.

Lord Lyndhurst said, he would support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement. He would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement.

From the Liverpool Courier, May 9. The Cholera.—The returns from the various Boards of Health to the Council-office, London, on Saturday, present only two cases in the metropolis; there had been 3 recoveries, but no deaths, and the total number of cases remaining was 17.

The French capital which has been the scene of an extraordinary mortality, was according to the last accounts, beginning to experience considerable diminution in the number of deaths, which leads us to hope that the pestilence had spent its strength, and that the health of the city would be speedily restored.

A gentleman just returned from Paris, where he resided during the hottest of the eruption of cholera, has given us the following illustration of its ravages:—A person of his acquaintance kept a lodging-house, entering the care of attendance, as is the custom in Paris, to maintain an order of cleanliness in the tenants.

The Duke of Newcastle said, he would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement. He would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement.

Lord Lyndhurst said, he would support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement. He would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement.

THE OBSERVER.

ST. JOHN, TUESDAY, JUNE 2, 1832.

The English Mail for May arrived here on Saturday evening, bringing London dates to the 6th of the month. It has furnished us with the most interesting news of the day, and we are enabled to give you a more complete account of the events of the week.

The Duke of Newcastle said, he would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement. He would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement.

From the Liverpool Courier, May 9. The Cholera.—The returns from the various Boards of Health to the Council-office, London, on Saturday, present only two cases in the metropolis; there had been 3 recoveries, but no deaths, and the total number of cases remaining was 17.

The French capital which has been the scene of an extraordinary mortality, was according to the last accounts, beginning to experience considerable diminution in the number of deaths, which leads us to hope that the pestilence had spent its strength, and that the health of the city would be speedily restored.

A gentleman just returned from Paris, where he resided during the hottest of the eruption of cholera, has given us the following illustration of its ravages:—A person of his acquaintance kept a lodging-house, entering the care of attendance, as is the custom in Paris, to maintain an order of cleanliness in the tenants.

The Duke of Newcastle said, he would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement. He would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement.

Lord Lyndhurst said, he would support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement. He would not support the bill, but he would support the principle of enfranchisement.