THE BURSTING OF BOILERS.
The naval correspondent of the London Morning Post has something interesting to say on the subject of the bursting of boilers aboard ship, of which so much has been heard. When a steamship sinks it is inevitable that reports should get about that the boilers burst as she went down. There is a roar and a great explosion of steam from the funnels as the boilers become submerged, and it is assumed that this can only be caused by their bursting. It has, however, been proved over and over again that this effect is merely

How to Have Successful Parties

By RUTH CAMERON

"WHY, oh, why aren't my parties ever real successes like Gretchen's?" wailed a dejected hostess the morning after she had given a little function. "I work myself most to death to have everything just right, and still I know people don't enjoy themselves as they do at Gretchen's house, and she never takes half the trouble I do."

We all know that there are some homes where we always seem to have a good time, no matter how simple the fare or how commonplace the entertainment provided, and others where we do not have half the pleasure, even though the fare may be sumptuous and the entertainment most elaborate.

Now, why is it? What makes one party be a success and another fail?

Well, for one thing, I think this dejected hostess put her finger on her chief mistake when she said she worked herself almost to death to make her party a success. Doubtless that was the very reason why it was a failure. A epic and span house, an elaborate programme and the most delicious fare will not counteract the depressing influence of a hostess who tries vainly to hide her anxiety and her weariness as a part of your entertainment. The original idea of entertaining, an idea which has been buried under the clatter of a party, is that your guests come to see you. If you have piled upon it, it is that your guests come to see you. If you have piled upon it, it is that your guests come to see you.

Again, don't forget that it's people that make a good time infinitely more than things. In other words, the prime requisite of a jolly party is a congenial crowd. Get a congenial crowd together just let them talk, and feed them nothing but lemonade and cake, and they'll have a better time than you could give them with the most delicious fare and offered the most elaborate entertainment.

Be sure to have at least one of those folks who "make things go," on your list. Everybody has at least one or two such in his acquaintance. They may not be any cleverer or more popular than other people, but they happen to have this gift. Look over your list of guests to see if you have invited one of these folks, and if you haven't, get hold of one by hook or crook.

Be sure to have some game to begin with which will break up the ice; no matter how silly it is, so that it dispels the stiffness which is the result of a formal gathering of congenial people are apt to feel, when they have been bidden to a formal gathering.

And that brings me to my last suggestion. Don't have your party a formal gathering. To my mind, formality is the death-blow to enjoyment, and I am delighted to realize that the formal party of the last decade is rapidly disappearing. Eleventh-hour inspirations and telephone invitations are the order of the day. Centenary hospitality, and for my part I hope the pendulum will never swing back in the other direction.

La MARQUISE de FONTENAY

The King's Barge at the Healey Regatta—Mobsing of Prominent People in the Streets

(Copyright, 1912, by the Brewster Company)

Henley Regatta, which is to take place on July 6 next, will be a grand affair, indeed, judging by the preliminary notices given out. It is announced that the king and queen will be present, in their "ancient red and gold state barge."

This gorgeous vessel is 225 years old, according to the brass plate attached to it, it was "built by King William III. for Queen Mary, in 1689."

It is constructed of oak, is about forty feet long, and is propelled by twelve rowers, arrayed in scarlet coats, with the royal cipher in gold on the breast, blue breeches, buckled shoes, and velvet caps, of the jockey pattern, but much heavier and deeper. The barge, according to recent accounts, is in excellent condition, notwithstanding its age. Much gold was used in its ornamentation when it was first put together, more than two centuries ago, over the stern there is a canopy, with rich silk hangings, surmounted by a gilded crown. Those who are fortunate enough to be able to attend the regatta will probably be interested to observe whether the taste of William III, for brilliant colors is shared by his successor on the throne.

Perhaps something a little less flamboyant will satisfy George V. But if he sees fit to retain the twelve rowers in their splendid costumes, it may seem more appropriate to preserve the total ensemble, with the gold crown, red silk hangings, and all the old accessories.

Queen Victoria had a state barge, which was a much more modern affair, built in 1875 by Burgess, of Kingston-on-Thames. But she never used it. Once, it is said, she did go down to the water-side, with the intention of making a trip on board the barge, but was dissuaded by her Scotch gillie, John Brown, for, just as she was about to step on board, he looked up at the sky, cast his eye around the horizon, sniffed the wind dubiously, shook his head, and finally advised his mistress that he "wadna gang, an he were she, as he were."

So the queen changed her mind, and went back to the castle, and the boat was never used by her.

It is of mahogany and the body color of white enamel. The lower part of the inside is lined with walnut, and above the seats are panels of emerald green and gold, decorated with roses, thistles and shamrocks. At each thwart is a massive brass dolphin, and at the end of the boat, a large one, richly carved in wood. A canopy, supported by a solid brass frame, hangs over the stern. The cover is of green satin, and the curtains and upholstery of green silk rep. This barge, during the reign of King Edward, was frequently used by Queen Alexandra.

The etiquette governing the use of the royal barge is very strict, dating back from time immemorial. No doubt it is this which prevents a motor being placed in the boat, and the muscular exertions of the twelve gorgeously uniformed oarsmen being dispensed with. For the present, however, the old customs are to be kept up.

King Edward had a special crew of watermen, under the command of William East, his barge master, who was formerly the champion sculler. The queen had no regular watermen, it being a matter of ancient tradition that the lords in waiting should each take an oar, when the queen consort signified her desire to go a-bathing.

Mobbing of Prominent People
The recent mobbing of President Taft in New York, where, waiting to take a quiet stroll along Fifth avenue, he was recognized and trailed by a crowd which swelled to hundreds and forced him to take refuge in the house of a friend, sets me wondering what is the peculiarity in the mental make-up of an American Englishman, or a German knot of citizens, that makes it so different from an equal number of Latin-French or Italian, for instance.

The late Emperor of Austria, for many years prior to his death, was subjected to such disgraceful mobbing that he was compelled to decline to take part in any public ceremony and had to devise extraordinary means to secure privacy while in Vienna, measures which the people of the city bitterly resented.

The good-natured, easy-going Emperor of Germany, whose equanimity and freedom from hypersensitiveness are proverbial, was so upset by the shameful mobbing of well-dressed Berliners people that he had had to adopt the extraordinary means

Scald the milk in a double kettle, add the eggs, rice, chocolate and sugar, and stir until thickened slightly.

Bake in under crust and cover with meringue.

ORANGE FLUFFS

For a light, sweet biscuit for a luncheon dainty, mix a baking powder biscuit dough roll it, cut into small circles; dip cubes of sugar in orange juice and plunge a cube in the center of each biscuit before baking; sprinkle with grated orange rind, add a few drops of melted butter; bake. Serve piping hot.

MOCK BISQUE SOUP

A quart can of tomatoes, three pints of milk, a large tablespoon of flour, butter the size of an egg, pepper and salt to taste, a scant teaspoon of soda. Put the tomato on to stew and the milk in a double kettle to boil, reserving, however, half a cup to mix with flour; mix the flour smoothly with this cold milk and cook 10 minutes. To the tomato add the soda; stir well, and rub through a strainer that as the enough to keep back the seeds; and butter, salt and pepper to the milk, and then the tomato. Serve immediately. If half the rule is made, stir the tomato well in the can before dividing, as the liquid portion is the more acid.

HINTS USEFUL TO HOUSEWIVES

MADE CURTAINS

Most of us are prejudiced against "ready-made" curtains, but I have seen some lovely ones this season. A Harvard Bachelor writer. Some bedroom curtains made of figured scrim and trimmed with a narrow lace and insertion were extremely simple and pretty. They were selling for $3.50 a pair. There were some made of a finer scrim, but trimmed just as simply, that were selling for a little bit more and some of white bobbinet that were about the same price. In other places I saw them not quite as well made, but very satisfactory, for $1.50 and $2 a pair.

FITTING A SKIRT

When fitting a skirt for myself I found it was quite difficult to get it even around the bottom, so adopted a method which proved very simple and helpful, says a Needlecraft correspondent. Chalk the edge of a box or table thoroughly, put on the skirt and turn around slowly, standing in correct position so that the skirt will be marked evenly. Measure from this chalkline to the width of hem wanted, turn and haste, and you will have a skirt that hangs perfectly.

LASTING QUILTS

For making durable, warm quilts (especially for boys) use a cotton handkerchief of fine knitting-cotton. Sew the blanket to the quilting-frames, spread the batting evenly over, and the very closely. After taking from the frame only three sides of the blanket need be stitched, says Needlecraft. This quilt or "comfort" is quickly made, will last much longer than the ordinary variety, and will not fade so much in washing.

LAMP SHADE

A dainty shade for a glass lamp, and one which is particularly nice to summer is made of a piece of flint net of the rather coarse curtain variety, says the Chicago Inter Ocean. A ruffle is formed by allowing the straight edge to extend two and a half inches below the foundation. The net is gathered at top and bottom to the foundation, which should be covered with white India silk. The top gathering is covered with a white cotton gimp.
