

NEED CURFEW LAW

Grave Problem, Says Halifax Newspaper

OBLIGATION OF PARENTS

Said to Be Impossible to Cope With Conditions Under Existing Legislation — Movement in Favor of a Girls' Home

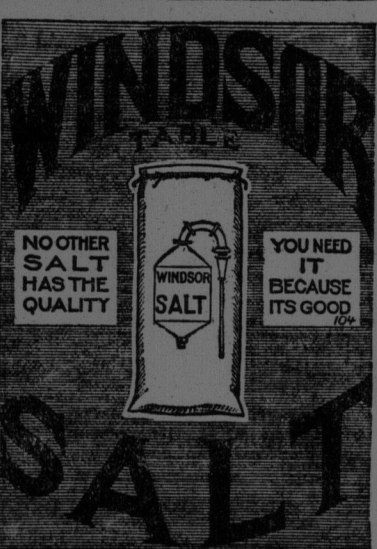

(Halifax Echo) It seems to be generally conceded in all cities now that something must be done to keep children off the streets at night, and in Halifax the head of movement in that direction is just as plain as in other cities of similar population. There is a movement in favor of a girls' home, an institution in favor of a girls' home, an institution in favor of a girls' home, an institution in favor of a girls' home...

In the large cities the explanation of children in the streets is crowded tenements, but that cannot apply very largely to Halifax, though it is stated as a fact by persons in a position to know that there are a limited number of cases of "herding" in tenements, the conditions being deplorable and surprising. A social worker informed the Echo of one case where a widow, her daughter, and son-in-law and two or three young children all lived in one room, eating as well as sleeping there. But such extreme conditions are not common in Halifax and "crowded tenements" cannot explain away the cause of children in the street at night here.

Street Walkers There are numbers who walk the streets at night beyond the age which might be considered childhood's limit, who act in a regrettable manner, and of course the girls' home proposed, as well as other like institutions, would meet their case if convictions of an offence could be had against them. But it is not easy at times to get convictions. People have an idea that a girl who walks the street can be punished as a street walker and they do not know that in order to make out a case on such a charge it must be proven that the girl is an immoral person. People who at times see young girls loitering about the streets think it is only a matter of the police running and grabbing them and putting a stop to that sort of thing. Such people are surprised to find that the policemen dare not interfere with the girls unless they have violated the law, and it is no violation of such to be up on the street.

Sometimes when young girls are seen about the streets at night under suspicious circumstances, the matter is brought to the attention of the parents, and there are cases when the parents take the proper action to put a stop to the actions. But at times the parent will naturally refuse to believe there is any ground for suspicion of his or her particular girl—or perhaps boy—and the party who undertakes to communicate with the parent has perhaps in the latter made an enemy for life. But it all goes to show that the law in the provisions for the growth of youth under healthy circumstances, and the old system of the curfew bell is gradually coming to the front again. In the minds of people who give the situation thought, as one of the best methods of remedying the conditions as to the youngsters, especially girls, on the street at night. But it requires legislation and it requires enforcement in to the full in its early stage in order to command respect.

A local judge interested in social matters particularly relating to children, commenting recently on the freedom of children in the streets of the city at night, remarked that it seemed a pity the parents or persons responsible for the guardianship of young girls who loiter about the streets at night, could not be brought before the courts for negligence. So it would appear that in the interest of the children, of society, and of all concerned, the law must come to the rescue, either in curfew provisions or legislation that will bring to careless parents or guardians realization of their responsibilities. Otherwise the problem must become an exceedingly grave one in the not very distant future. The deplorable conditions are not at all peculiar to Halifax, and as it seems to have a tendency to lessen the control or care of many parents over children in such a direction as that re-

GRANDMA USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HAIR

She Mixed Sulphur With it To Restore Color, Gloss, Thickness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is falling, gray or dry, scraggly and thinning. The sage tea and sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyle's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy."

NO ONE OPPOSES IN NEW ZEALAND

Does not Oppose Woman Suffrage in New Zealand, Suggested Mrs. Anderson

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt was surprised to find that her organization had brought her into suffrage. "I have never made a speech since I ever made," she said, "and I have never broken it. Your badge was the first one I saw in its pages. They had some trouble to find anything to say, and I understood to do the work. Our boys are a prohibition town, but there were five saloons in it, and I knew it. An investigation was undertaken, and different men testified to go."
