

"He made Port Arthur beautiful,
But declined to 'punch' their clock."

—Engineering and Mining.

"Moose Jaw has secured the services of a gentleman who is going to place himself at the head of his profession. Mr. Antonisen during the years he served as city engineer for Port Arthur accomplished a great deal of work and made such progress in bringing the ideals of the citizens to a higher plane that the improvement henceforth to conform to those now executed must be of a permanent and pleasing character. Greatly hampered in his work by men who were without training and deficient in the sense of art in municipal works, what he did accomplish is really remarkable. In only one or two instances did he have the privilege of a free hand in the carrying out of his ideas, but in those instances he showed fully his capacity. A city beautiful cannot be created without the expenditure of money, nor can it be brought about without the aid of persons who are versed in the arts. That he has the ability both to create and execute has been amply demonstrated."—Evening Chronicle.
