He sleeps again; life's fevered dream is o'er; The light that shone athwart our path is fled, The tender bud, too frail to lift its head, Has sunk into the dust to rise no more.

VALUE OF TIME.—REV. T. P. O'Reilly preached before the members of the Holy Family Guild in St. Alphonsus Church, recently, on this subject, and gave some wholesome advice to his listeners.

SOFT CORE

Like the running brook, the red blood that flows through the veins has to come from somewhere.

in action then in thought. If those who put little value on time reflected that there was a great difference between time and eternity, that one minute they were in time and that next minute they might be in eternity, where time was no more, where a thousand years was but as a second, and that one minute in this life could damn a man for all eternity or place him for ever in glory, people would not idle away their time as they do.

Those people who idled away their time had never time to spare for prayer. In the morning they lay to the last minute, and then had to hurry to their work, and at night they were too tired.

In conclusion Father O'Reilly asked his hearers to visit the Blessed Sacrament in the evenings after working hours, if it was only for a minute.

As far as he was able to judge, the country of France had been victimized by sugh reading, and the same thing was happening in this country, where books of doubtful morality were issued weekly from the press in their thousands.

A HOME FOR SERVANTS.—A correspondent of "The Universe," of London, England, tells of the organization of a new home for Catholic servants, and also furnishes some sad incidents to show how urgent is the need of such an institution.

There was opened in the beginning of the week, in the premises formerly occupied by St. Peter's Seminary, and at a later period as a presbytery by the clergy of Patrick, St. Zita's Home. The home is destined for the training of Catholic servants, and a boarding place till suited for others of the domestic class who may be out of a situation. That there is room for such an institution, a case which occurred in Glasgow only last week supplies strong evidence.
