WHAT ABOUT THAT SPECIAL?

We read much in the Daily News about the Premier's tramp through the "neglected" district of Burin, but nothing at all about the luxury of a special train to Placentia last Saturday.

Why did not the Premier leave at the usual time and by the usual means?

Why could not he go out by Saturday morning's train and connect with the steamer in the usual way?

On these points the Daily News preserves its usual reticence, and has not even a word to say as to the cause which cut short Hon. C. H. Emerson's visit to the Old Country. Was Mr. Emerson specially called upon to return? If so, who cabled for him? If so, what was the reason of this recall? If so, why was it urgent? If so, why did Mr. Emerson respond to the recall?

Why was the Premier waiting for Mr. Emerson at the office of the latter on Saturday morning after the steamer came in port?

Did not a conference take place between the two of them?

Was that the reason that the Premier did not go out by Saturday morning's train?

Was that why the Premier took a special on Saturday?

Lastly, who pays for the special? Questions of a similar import we put yesterday; to-day we repeat them. Why are they not answered? Is there something to keep dark?

Another While Playing with Revolver.

Lowell, Mass., Aug. 15.—Little Anna Quinn, 14 years of age, was instantly killed in an explosion of a revolver in the hands of her playmate, Thelma Berg, 12 years of age, after the weapon had failed to discharge when the girl had placed it at the heart of her chum and friend.

The two children found the revolver in a drawer. The Quinn girl playfully held it against Thelma's heart. The trigger was pulled but the weapon failed to explode. Then Thelma took the revolver and placed it close to the Quinn girl's head and fired. This time the weapon exploded and the Quinn girl dropped dead at the feet of her friend. The child was absolved of all blame by the police.

Aviator, Stoker and Duke.

On several occasions the Duke of Westminster, who recently broke his collar-bone while playing polo, has risked his life for sport. In the hunting field he has had many falls, while about a year ago he was thrown out of a racing motor boat into the Solent, and was only rescued in the nick of time. He has been practicing aviation for some time, while such is his fondness for motoring that his tyre bill averages $50 a week. As a soldier he saw active service in South Africa, and on one occasion, in order that he might gain practical experience of ship engines, crossed the Atlantic as a stoker on one of the liners. He is one of the richest men in England, being owner of the greater part of Mayfair and Belgravia; his estates bringing him in something like $5,000 a day.

Gloves are dyed in every conceivable shade to match the colored shoes and stockings, which in every case ought to harmonize with the toilette.

It is possible to buy remnants of fine carpets very cheap, and these, cut into rug lengths and with a fringe added, make excellent and handsome rugs.

Finally the demonstration became so great that it began to attract the attention of the man in the chair, and he closed one eye and said, "Wh-wh-ah-ah's the matter, w-yez?"

"Good Lord!" said the barber, "I've cut off the whole lower part of your ear."

"Have ye? Ah, thin, go on with ye! business. It was too long anyhow!"
