Not a Sign of Cold, Catarrh, or Throat Trouble Will Remain!
Quick relief for that headache—just one breath through Catarrhose Inhaler and you feel better.
The soothing, piney vapor of Catarrhose clears the head instantly; its healing balsamic fumes takes the sting out of the nose, stop sniffles, ease the throat, cure the cough and destroy all the violence of catarrh.
No other remedy treats Catarrh so directly, so quickly; every breath you draw through the Inhaler carries a marvelous lot of healing virtue—carries death to the germs that cause the trouble.
You can't keep Catarrh—nor can you hang to a cold, or have any chest or throat trouble if you use Catarrhose. It is guaranteed to make you well.

"My head used to fairly split with an awful pain over the eyes."
"It was always worse when my catarrh was bad. I had the meanest sores and crusts inside the nose, and continually coughed both day and night. The first day's use of Catarrhose made a grand improvement. Every hour I felt better. Catarrhose cured me perfectly."
O. P. DINGMAN,
Cordova, Ont.

Attack of the Light Brigades.

Brilliant Exploit By Gallant Australian Troops—Triangle of Death—Fight in Which Few Lived to Recount Their Experiences.
In graphic language Captain C. E. W. Bean, the official Press representative with the Australian Forces in the Dardanelles, tells the story of the charge of Australian Light Horse.
In part, he says, writing from Kabatepe:

It differed from the charge of the Light Brigade in that it was made by horsemen who had volunteered to fight on foot or in any other way provided they could only get to Gallipoli and help the other Australians there. There are the two scaling ladders which they carried with them lying out there in the scrub about halfway to the enemy's trench, and a number of tumbled little heaps of that dull peaspow-coloured Australian khaki which is the hallmark of unrecorded heroism on every battlefield in this peninsula.

You can piece together a few simple deductions as to the details. There are no Victoria Crosses—there are no birthday honours. But I know just this—that for sheer self-sacrificing heroism there was never a deed in history that surpassed the charge which two Australian Light Horse Brigades made in the first light of Saturday, August 7, in order to help their comrades in a critical moment of a great battle.

The charge was made against the centre of the Turkish position. For four long months we and the Turks have faced one another along a line shaped like two sides of a triangle, the third side or base being the sea. We held an inner triangle and the Turks an outer one, and at the apex the two have from the first come very, very close together. At various times we have been separated from one another only by a single barricade of sandbags, six feet in width, hastily piled across a communication trench; but of late conditions have been less strained, and the two sides have been facing one another on both sides of the angle at about 15 to 20 yards at the closest. It was up two ridges, and from the hill between them that the First and Third Light Horse Brigades were ordered to attack at daybreak on August 7.

Sixteen Weeks Without Rest.
The men of the Australian and New Zealand Army Corps had been in those trenches 16 weeks without rest and without relief. It was all a part of a very small part—of a very big movement.
Before daybreak the attacking parties filed into the trenches from which they were to make the rush. They were in their shirts with their sleeves rolled up and the brown forearm bandages showing. Their knees were bare and sunburnt. Each man carried his full kit with 200 rounds of ammunition.

The attack on the left-hand side of the apex was to be made by the 8th Light Horse with the 10th Light Horse following. Four lines would start of 175 each, the first and second lines being from the 8th Light Horse, that is Victorians, and the third and fourth lines being 10th Light Horse, Western Australians. The first line was to carry, amongst other things, two scaling ladders made for the occasion. The fourth line would carry picks, shovels, and a dozen sorts of engineering supplies, but it was to fight like the others if necessary.

In order to help the men to get out of the trench like a flash, pegs had been driven into the side of the trench and footholds cut. As the moment for the charge came near the first line got its foothold on these, and the second line stood in the trench behind it ready to give it a leg up. And then at four o'clock to the moment the bombardment by our guns began. I have seen such bombardments often at Helles, but never since the first week of our landing has the like of it been seen in Anzac. Every gun on land and shore that could be brought to bear emptied itself as fast as the gun's crew could load into the maze of Turkish trenches on the backbone of the ridge in front of the apex of our position.

Range of Clouds.
The dust of the bombardment rolled across the range of clouds, shutting out all view of the place from a distance. For half an hour the slope in front of our trenches was an inferno, and then the uproar ceased as suddenly as it had begun—ceased as if cut off short by the stroke of a knife. And that same instant the Light Horse attack was launched.
Colonel White stood by the parapet with his watch in his hand. He and two other officers had carefully set and compared their watches, and the three now stood under the parapet at three points in the line watching the second hand fidget its way round. "Three minutes to go," said the Colonel. Then simply, "Go!"
They were over the parapet like a flash, the Colonel amongst them, the officers in line with the men. Exactly 4.30—the Light Horse were making their charge. There were no British rifles in all that fire—it was the grating of the Turkish rifles and machine guns as the Light Horse cleared the Australian parapet.
One knew that nobody could live in it. Many fell back into the trench wounded before they had cleared even the parapet. Others wounded just outside managed to crawl back and second and third time and killed, as tumble in before they were hit at their certain would be if they remained lying out there. Colonel White managed to run eight or ten yards before he was killed. The scaling ladders are lying out there about the same distance out. Exactly two minutes after the first line had cleared the parapet, the second line jumped out without the slightest hesitation and followed them.
No one knew how it happened. And probably no one will ever know. But some either of that first line or of the second line managed to get into the extreme right hand corner of the enemy's trench. They carried with them a small flag to put up in the enemy's trench if they captured it, and the appearance of this flag was to be the signal for a party of the Royal Welsh Fusiliers to attack up the gully to the right.
Two men were put in the head of one of our foremost saps with periscopes to watch for the first sign of this flag in the enemy's trench. By this time a French "75"—a gun captured by the Turks from the Serbians in the Balkan War—was pouring her

Are Advertisements Read?

Answer the Following Questions "Yourself."
If you were smoking too much and wanted to chew some kind of gum instead of smoking, what would "you" ask for?
If in dressing, one of your garters broke and you sent for another pair, what kind of garter would "you" tell your messenger to buy?
If you were in immediate need of a collar and sent a messenger to buy one for you, what collar would "you" tell him to ask for?
Suppose you ran out of tooth-powder and wanted it in a hurry, if you telephoned to your druggist, what kind would you tell him to send you?
It is now time to discard your straw hat—what kind of felt hat will "you" call for?
There are four or five different shoes made which are well-known throughout the country. What brand do "you" buy?
Can you honestly answer these six questions without naming at least five advertised products?
Don't you see that even though you may never "knowingly" read advertisements, you have been "unconsciously" influenced by them?
We all read advertisements. It's a rare man, these days, who is not influenced more by advertising than he has any idea of.

Zeppelins Kill 11 Canadians in Raid on England.
Ottawa, Oct. 16.—The Zeppelin raids on England have now come home to Canada. From the casualty lists received from information obtained from local militia sources, it would appear that eleven Canadian artillerymen were among those who lost their lives in the last raid, that of the 13th.
The total military casualties reported in the official statement by the British authorities were fourteen killed and thirteen wounded, so that it would appear that Canadians were the chief sufferers. Besides the eleven men who lost their lives, three are reported as missing and three wounded. All these casualties took place at Otterpool Camp, Kent.
The casualties took place among the 5th Brigade of the Canadian Second Division Artillery. Ten of the casualties were reported Thursday night and the remainder last night. As far as is known, these are the first Canadians to meet death as a result of a Zeppelin raid.
Last night's casualties of this type are all Western men, except one, whose next of kin is given as residing in St. Catharines, Ont., and was a member of the 29th Battery.

Reached the Parapet.
Major Logan, who led one party, is said actually to have reached the Turkish parapet and fallen into it. Lieut. Bourne, who led the other, fell about ten yards from our trench. The boy who fell beside him had his leg practically severed by machine gun bullets.
The 1st Regiment attacked from the hill in the gully. Two squadrons of the 1st Light Horse went out, one working up the gully and the other going straight over the parapet as soon as the first was in position. The lowest trench is never held by the Turks by day, and the Light Horse, by using stick bombs, drove the Turks clean out of the two others. One party rushed the second trench, and from there began to bomb the trench ahead of it.
Suddenly a white hand appeared over the parapet of the trench in front furiously waving. The colonel of the regiment, who had come out with his men, recognised it for the hand of a subaltern who had led his men right over into the third trench, and immediately leapt over the parapet and joined the party in the third trench which had previously been in the most uncomfortable position of being bombed by its friends from behind and by the enemy from in front. Then for two hours this party remained fighting the Turks in the trenches further up hill as best they could with the slender supply of bombs that came over to them.
But the Turk in his trenches up the hill had it all his own way in this bomb battle. His higher trenches were connected with the trench which we held by frequent narrow manhole tunnels. At the same time as a Turk pitched a bomb through the air towards the lower trench he would blow a second bomb down the tunnel in the same direction, and our men, intent on dodging the bomb that was coming through the air, would find a bomb bursting underneath their feet.
In the meantime, all the other attacks having ended, the whole of the Turkish machine guns that could bear upon the spot were turned upon the three trenches still held by the 1st Light Horse; and after two hours of furious fighting the Commander of the regiment ordered a retirement.
So ended the attack of the two Light Horse Brigades. The one man who came back from the parapet of the Turkish trenches on the Neck reported that the Turks there had their packs on and were in full marching order—evidently part of a battalion that had been hurried up from the reserve or else which was being hurried off to reinforce further north when this attack in the centre delayed it.
The Australian Light Horse in the richest and the fullest manner achieved the object for which their help had become necessary at a critical period of a great movement.

Splendid Prohibition Meeting at Topsail.
Messrs. J. S. Currie, M.H.A., and Albert Soper, Esq., delegates from the St. John's Committee, and Rev. Canon Netten, of Topsail, held a public meeting in the L.O.A. Hall in the interest of prohibition last night. There was quite a large attendance who gave the speakers a splendid hearing. John J. Butler, Esq., acted as chairman. Messrs. Currie and Soper dealt with the liquor question in an effective and masterly manner showing they had the matter well in hand, and proved to those present the harmful results from the sale of intoxicating liquors. They showed the large gathering present the difference that had come to other prohibition countries and would also come to pass and masterly manner. John's would become a thing of the past. The Rev. Canon Netten then endorsed all the previous speakers and gave some interesting experiences which he had come in contact with during his ministry in the island. Mr. Soper then asked the men interested to remain, and after the singing of the National Anthem a successful prohibition meeting was brought to a close. About sixty men remained after the meeting. The Rev. Canon Netten was elected Chairman, and Jabez Butler, Esq., jr., elected assistant and James K. Bursell, Esq., Secretary. Some forty men present gave in their names to the secretary to form a committee and another meeting will take place Tuesday to get to work to roll up a big poll for prohibition on Nov. 4th. —COR.
