Better News.

If some sinister clouds have been gathering in the war sky of late, a refreshing gleam of sunshine breaks through them to-day. It is impossible to read the messages of this morning without a sense of encouragement, a feeling that matters all round are improving daily. The darkest cloud has been over Russia, and the severe censorship has lifted the curtain sufficiently to show that a conflict fraught with far-reaching possibilities has ended, for the moment at any rate, in a victory for the Provisional Government and its confirmation in the policy it is pursuing. But the situation yet retains many elements of danger, the cloud is not yet dispersed. If the speech of Prince Tseretelli to the Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates means that a large part of the Russian people are set upon demanding assurances from the allied democracies of a "no annexation, no expropriation" policy, their demands may prove a little too extreme and lead to trouble. It all depends upon the interpretation of these words and others of like tenor. But for the present much of the misgiving that has been felt in the Allied capitals will be removed.

The news from the British and French fronts is of the brightest. The French have smashed their way further towards Laon and the high land traversed by the Chemin des Dames is in their hands. The lying bulletins from Berlin need not be regarded. The correspondents on both fronts are lavish of details which in reality make better reading than news of the taking of many places. The enemy's recourse to the massed formation system of attack seems to be general and not confined to isolated engagements. It is the only answer he can make to the terrible superiority of artillery which now faces him and the frightful carnage that results is suggested in every line of the messages. Under existing conditions, where army movements are impossible, we could hear of nothing better than this murderous decimation of the German ranks, which is melting their reserves away to nothing. It is a brutal business but the only one which will end the war.

As we predicted on Saturday, the French blow came as soon as the British drive had reached its objective and halted. It is likely that our Allies will hold the centre of the stage for some time, for they have now attained a position from which a vital thrust can be made at the German line centred upon St. Quentin and Laon. With the Russians alive to the meaning of the withdrawal of German divisions from the East and preparing to fight, we may expect to hear of startling events before a fortnight has elapsed.

The Prohibition Case

The interesting and much postponed Beef, Iron and Wine case was heard at the Magistrate's Court before Judge Morris this forenoon, Mary Spire, a shopkeeper, being charged with a breach of the Prohibition Act. Patrick Gray was the first witness called. He testified that he visited Mrs. Spire's shop on Sunday, April 26th, and bought three flasks of Beef, Iron and Wine, and paid fifty cents each for them. He drank two and got drunk. Cross-examined as to the effect it had on him, Gray answered that he felt as merry as he ever did in his whole lifetime, but the aftermath made him heavy, stupid and foolish, coupled with a prolonged headache. Const. Myers gave evidence that he found a flask of the patent medicine on Gray when he arrested him. When analyzed the contents of the flask showed 16.2 per cent of alcohol. Mr. H. V. LeMessurier, Deputy Minister of Customs, was the next witness sworn. He stated that Beef, Iron and Wine was being imported under the Customs heading of Alcoholic Preparations for Medicinal Purposes, and 30 per cent. duty was paid on it. Asked by the Judge as to whether he had received any permits for the importation of spirituous liquors, witness replied in the affirmative and that he had refused several applicants. Again asked as to whether he had official notification prohibiting the importation of liquors, witness said he had received nothing in writing, but he knew that few passages at arms occurred, the counsel advancing the analogy that Mr. LeMessurier had as much right to make such refusal in his official capacity as Collector of Customs as he (the Judge) did to try this case on the grounds that he held no official notification. Mr. A. E. Parkins then gave evidence. He was a wholesale dealer in drugs and medicines and supplied the trade with alcoholic medicinal wines. He stated that a large percentage of alcohol was used in the preparations of all medicines as alcohol was the world's best solvent and had great preservative power, quoting the British authorities for the statements. Asked by the Judge if he knew he was engaged in the manufacture of an alcoholic beverage (Beef, Iron and Wine), witness replied that he did not and added that Beef, Iron and Wine was known all the world over as a household remedy.

Mr. Hunt conducted the case for the prosecution and at 1 p.m. an adjournment was taken until to-morrow afternoon.

Promoted on the Field of Battle.

Mr. W. R. Dove, of Steer Bros., Ltd., was notified by the Acting Frontier on Saturday that his brother-in-law, Lieut. Rupert W. Bartlett, had been promoted to Captain on the field of battle. An official message to that effect was received by Mr. Bennett from the Old Country. The gallant officer is a son of Capt. Wm. Bartlett of Brigus, and youngest brother of Capt. Bob Bartlett, of Arctic fame. At the outbreak of hostilities he was among the first to offer for King and Country and before leaving for the Old Country had won his stripes as a non-commissioned officer. Shortly before leaving for Gallipoli he was given a commission as 2nd Lieut. and some time after was promoted to a Lieut. And now comes the good news that for his gallantry he has been awarded the distinguished honour of promotion on the field of battle. The Telegram joins with a host of friends in this country and in the Regiment in congratulating the gallant Captain on his well merited promotion.

A similar message stating that Lieut. Grant Paterson, nephew of Major Paterson, had also been promoted to Captain on the field of battle was received on Saturday. Capt. Paterson joined the 1st Newfoundland Regiment as a private in 1914 and together with Capt. Bartlett went overseas with his regiment. A peculiar coincidence in relation to the gallant officers is that they enlisted at the same time, were together in England and Scotland, received their promotion from private to non-commissioned officers, to 2nd Lieut. and 1st Lieut. about the same time. And most fitting of all is that they should be honoured on the field of battle at the same time. We would not be surprised to hear of greater things coming from these dashing young officers. We extend our hearty congratulations to Capt. Grant Paterson on his equally well-merited promotion.

Man Injured.

A young man named Murphy met with a nasty accident last night by being hit in the back by a shaft of a carriage. It happened the victim was standing at the junction of Barte's Hill and New Gover Street when a light horse attached to a carriage dashed up the hill and striking the unfortunate young man as described knocked him to the ground at the same time inflicting two severe cuts in his forehead. He was picked up in a state of semi-consciousness and brought to a nearby druggist, who on bandaging his wounds advised him to obtain the services of a doctor.

Here and There.

WEATHER REPORT.—The weather across country is light N.W. wind and fine, temperature 38 to 45 above.

HERE WITH SEALS.—The schr. Mac Lake having on board 2,800 seals from Greenspond, is now in port. The schooner Lizzie, Guy, reached port from Catalina with a part cargo of 300 seals, all of which were taken by landmen during the spring; most of the seals are old ones.

THE PRICE OF COAL.—We are informed by Messrs. A. Harvey & Co. that it is not correct as might be inferred from published reports, that the price of all coal has advanced to $14.20 a ton. The North Sydney coal that has been imported in reply to a large demand is selling at that price, owing to increased handling expenses, but Sydney coal and Scotch coal are selling at $11.20 and $11.60 respectively.

BRICKLAYERS ON STRIKE.—We are informed by a prominent official of the Bricklayers' Union that a number of their members have decided to quit work until such time as their employers guarantee them $5 for an 8-hour day. Our informant states that the average bricklayer is not employed more than a little and a half months throughout the year and in view of the high cost of living the former wage of $4 a day was insufficient to live on. Eleven of the Union men started work at the new fresh fish plant this morning and are laying at an average of 1,200 bricks per man, or a total of 13,200 bricks per day.
