"ACTIVE COMPETITION TODAY,"

Said a leading baker to us recently, "places a very heavy penalty on back-number methods." True business is a stern task-master. It says to the baker: "Keep up with the procession—or step aside." That is the Reason for the having the most up-to-date methods in vogue today. We do not want to step aside. Therefore, we ask, if you have tried our

WHITE OR WHOLE WHEAT BREAD?

If not, you have missed a treat. And again it is so good for the children—it makes them healthy.

Judgment has just been handed down for the Plaintiff by Mr. Justice Macdonald in the case of James Frye against Ed. Marsham and Thomas McGladrey, which was tried at the Fall Assize here. The plaintiff, Frye, while proceeding up Thompson Street in the Annex, towards the Great Northern Station and while partly across a crossing, was knocked down by the defendant McGladrey's car, driven at the time by the defendant Marsham. His Lordship has allowed the plaintiff Frye $1800.00 and costs. Herchmer & Mitchell were acting for the plaintiff and Lawe & Fisher for defendant McGladrey and G. J. Spreull for defendant Marsham.

The Fernie local of the Brewery Workers' union held its annual banquet in the Grand Central hotel Friday evening last, at which officers for the year were formerly placed in office. After the dinner, Thomas Uphill, M.P.P., was appointed chairman, and expressed great appreciation of the work of the brewery workers in remaining true to the union. He pointed out that at one time nearly every craft had its own local union here, but backsliding among the members had left only two labor union locals in the city, these being the miners and brewery workers. The following program was then proceeded with: song, F. E. Alexander; address, J. McGladrey, president of the brewery workers' union; song, Messrs. Easton, Banks and Riley; address, J. Jerue, brewmaster; French song and dance, Walter Harwood and Vic Lallonde; address, J. Robson, local secretary; song, George Bowen; step dance, Jack (Lanky) Hayes; recitation, H. Wheeler. This was followed by a brief outline of what transpired during the last session of the legislature, by Mr. Uphill, who is one of the labor representatives. Every individual present was then called upon to take a part in the program, making a real lively close to one of the successful gatherings the brewery workers have ever held.
