WANT AD TIPS

Finding the Right Landlord

Owners of property for rent want desirable tenants. In many cases they won't knowingly rent to any other kind. A desirable tenant is one who can be depended on to pay rent promptly; who can be depended on to exercise all reasonable care of the property, so there will be a minimum of "wear and tear"; who can reasonably be expected to be a permanent ten int, or a tenant for a fairly long period, or for as long as the landlord wishes to rent.

To desirable tenants, owners rent property they would only tent to others at a higher rental-perhaps would not rent

When an advertiser who is a desirable tenant sets out to find a new apartment or house, he should let the fact that he is a "quality" tenant help him. He can easily do this by framing the right Want Ad.

Reading any "Wanted To Rent" ad., the landlord will form a mental picture of the advertiser. The latter should help him to form the favorable picture—the picture of a desirable tenant.

So, in addition to indicating the sort of rent he is looking for, the Want Advertiser should put into his message favorable things about himself. If the family is adults only, that can be stated-many landlords prefer to rent to such. If the family is small, that will interest landlords-they are partial to small families.

Let us assume the Want Advertiser has lived in his present rented apartment for four years. He can use effectively at the end of his Want Ad. the statement: "Present landlord, from whom I have rented for four years, will recommend me." One shrewd advertiser inserted this:

"Our present home is a rent, but the care we have given lawn and garden have made it the most attractive place on the street. We would like to hear from owner who wishes to rent to tenant who will take extraordinary good care of his property.'

When searching for an apartment or house, frame a Want Ad. which reveals what a desirable tenant you are, (All Rights Reserved.)
