

PREMIER AT ROSLAND

Hon. Mr. Turner Discusses With the Board of Trade the Needs of Kootenay.

Further Aid to Public Works in Prospect Owing to Increased Revenue.

From the Rosland Miner, Oct. 12. The board of trade rooms in the Imperial block were completely filled last evening on the occasion of the meeting to hear the Hon. J. H. Turner, Premier of the province, who arrived in the city yesterday morning.

J. S. C. Fraser, vice-president of the board, presided, and Smith Curtis read the following memorial:

To the Honorable J. H. Turner, Premier of the British Columbia Province.

Sir.—The board of trade of the city of Rosland extends to you a hearty welcome to our young city, and trusts that your visit will be pleasant and instructive.

It is gratifying to our citizens and especially to our business men to have you come among us. Understanding that you are largely for the purpose of learning at first hand the special wants and necessities of the localities visited, the board desires to assist you in as laudable an object, and therefore requests your consideration of the pressing needs of the Rosland district.

In asking the government to give considerable financial aid to this locality, the board believes it is justified in so doing by the very large revenue the province is realizing from Rosland.

The Board asks the attention of yourself and your government to the following matters: (1) A court house; (2) A supreme court building; (3) A school; (4) An increased school appropriation; (5) Reasonable grants for trails and roads; (6) Additional grants for the purchase of land for hospitals; (7) The abolition of the mine's license, and especially of the company's license; (8) The abolition of the city limits; (9) The abolition of the provincial electoral districts to give the trail-creed division a representative.

Each of the classes was treated at some length in the memorial. The document was signed by the officers of the board of trade. After expressing his pleasure at being able to meet the people of Rosland, the Premier turned at once to the consideration of the memorial.

In regard to the first clause, referring to the revenue derived from the city of Rosland, Mr. Turner pointed out that the provincial receipts from this neighborhood came not so much from the municipality as from the surrounding area. Nevertheless, the government fully appreciated the highly important position held by Rosland, and recognized in her a city of the most brilliant future.

The government, said Mr. Turner, had not been informed by the Supreme court judges that they would not hold court in Rosland through lack of suitable buildings. What he understood them to say was that there was no suitable building here in which to receive them. During his present visit he had been impressed with the importance of the present government building, and though he had formerly imagined that by adding to the existing building proper accommodations for holding court could be discovered, yet since arriving here he had discovered that a new court house and government building is necessary, and he hoped that a suitable site for such a building could be secured. It would be impossible to build the new court house until the next session of the legislature, and he thought that an appropriation could be secured. For the present, he would have the government agent here secure suitable accommodations for holding court until a new building could be erected.

Regarding the new schoolhouse, the Premier said he had been shown the plans drawn up by the local government, which would cost 150 per cent. more than the amount of the appropriation. While he had committed himself to allocate the local school fund, he could not more than the allowance, yet he could hardly stretch the appropriation to the amount asked, and he would advise the local board to see if itself within the bounds of the amount.

Mr. Turner was happy to announce that the appointment of a Supreme court registrar is to be made here, and the appointment of a justice of the peace for the local office will probably be gazetted next Thursday. Unfortunately he was not in a position to give assurance that a land registry office would be established here.

Formerly, when the growth of the province was slow, it was found to be a satisfactory plan to allow the local government agent and the member from the district to see to the building of trails and roads. At present, though, it seemed desirable to put the construction of trails and roads in the hands of a disinterested engineer, who would be responsible for the proper execution of his department. He would not say that the district of Kootenay had received roads appropriate to its needs, but in connection with the roads was to be considered the building of railways in Kootenay. At the earnest solicitation of the people of the district, the government had guaranteed the interest on the bonds of the Nakusp & Sloan, and that subsidy had been nearly exhausted. Nevertheless he was pleased to have learned that in the past year the tributary road to the Nakusp & Sloan had been completed, and had quadrupled the amount of its traffic.

For the several years past the government had paid no attention to the public works, but in this respect it had been handicapped through the scarcity of revenue and the amount of territory demanding the necessary expenditure. He pointed out that the receipt from the sale of lands, formerly an important addition to the provincial revenues, had been dwindling away, but the other sources of revenue had been steadily increasing. The receipts for the ending June 30 were about $200,000 in excess of the estimates, and approximately a million and a half. At the same time the credit of the province was

DOG'S OF HIGH DEGREE.

The Kennel Club Open Their Noteworthy and Admirable Exhibition in Assembly Hall.

Sporting Dogs a Specially Strong Feature—Decorations Unsurpassed at Any Show in America.

First-class sporting dogs are a specialty of the exhibition, a fact to which the bench show now in progress at the Assembly hall on Fort street bears eloquent testimony. Terriers, wadge dogs and the pet classes do not command particular attention in this corner of the great West, but all the various lines of dog setters, cocker and field spaniels and pointers are the country in which they are at home.

Yesterday witnessed the formal opening of the dog show. The Lieutenant-Governor and His Worship Mayor Redfern did the honors at three in the afternoon, congratulating Superintendent Matson on the excellence of the display made under his energetic management.

Regarding the clause in the memorial authorizing the municipality to tax the mines in the city limits, Mr. Turner was not prepared to speak at present, but he was fully impressed with the necessity of recognizing the claim, and he would not favor the reduction of the license demand of companies.

In reference to the prevailing difficulty over titles of land in the city limits outside of the original townsite, the Premier preferred not to speak at present, as it was a subject now before the courts.

Regarding the clause in the memorial authorizing the municipality to tax the mines in the city limits, Mr. Turner was not prepared to speak at present, but he was fully impressed with the necessity of recognizing the claim, and he would not favor the reduction of the license demand of companies.

To revert to politics, he had found all along the line of his present trip that the present government was being vigorously sustained at the coming election. Not only in the government districts, but in the opposition sections of the country as well, the present government was being vigorously sustained at the coming election.

He hoped to carry out a number of measures needed by the municipality, chief among which was the extension of the railway system throughout the mining districts. He referred to the need of a railway from the Columbia river to the Boundary mines, and declared that the bringing of Boundary ore to Columbia river would have much to do with the thorough and successful establishment of Kootenay smelters. He had gone to Ottawa on a mission which he considered of the greatest importance, the construction of a railway from Kootenay to Pentiction. (Great applause.)

After ten days hard work he was assured that the road would be under way in six months. On his return to Kootenay Coast he was amazed to find that the whole plan had been thwarted, and not only that, but he was actually charged with having defrauded the government of this charge and to similar charges he would only point to his record of over 30 years in the province. If he had been a member of the present government, corruption it should certainly seem that he should be at least a moderately wealthy man by this time, while as a member of the present government he had not been able to do so much for his constituents. During his present visit he had been impressed with the importance of the present government building, and though he had formerly imagined that by adding to the existing building proper accommodations for holding court could be discovered, yet since arriving here he had discovered that a new court house and government building is necessary, and he hoped that a suitable site for such a building could be secured. It would be impossible to build the new court house until the next session of the legislature, and he thought that an appropriation could be secured. For the present, he would have the government agent here secure suitable accommodations for holding court until a new building could be erected.

Regarding the new schoolhouse, the Premier said he had been shown the plans drawn up by the local government, which would cost 150 per cent. more than the amount of the appropriation. While he had committed himself to allocate the local school fund, he could not more than the allowance, yet he could hardly stretch the appropriation to the amount asked, and he would advise the local board to see if itself within the bounds of the amount.

Mr. Turner was happy to announce that the appointment of a Supreme court registrar is to be made here, and the appointment of a justice of the peace for the local office will probably be gazetted next Thursday. Unfortunately he was not in a position to give assurance that a land registry office would be established here.

Formerly, when the growth of the province was slow, it was found to be a satisfactory plan to allow the local government agent and the member from the district to see to the building of trails and roads. At present, though, it seemed desirable to put the construction of trails and roads in the hands of a disinterested engineer, who would be responsible for the proper execution of his department. He would not say that the district of Kootenay had received roads appropriate to its needs, but in connection with the roads was to be considered the building of railways in Kootenay. At the earnest solicitation of the people of the district, the government had guaranteed the interest on the bonds of the Nakusp & Sloan, and that subsidy had been nearly exhausted. Nevertheless he was pleased to have learned that in the past year the tributary road to the Nakusp & Sloan had been completed, and had quadrupled the amount of its traffic.

For the several years past the government had paid no attention to the public works, but in this respect it had been handicapped through the scarcity of revenue and the amount of territory demanding the necessary expenditure. He pointed out that the receipt from the sale of lands, formerly an important addition to the provincial revenues, had been dwindling away, but the other sources of revenue had been steadily increasing. The receipts for the ending June 30 were about $200,000 in excess of the estimates, and approximately a million and a half. At the same time the credit of the province was

ONE HONEST MAN. Dear Editor.—Please inform your readers that I have written confidentially to the Hon. Mr. Turner, Premier of the province, regarding the receipt from the sale of lands, formerly an important addition to the provincial revenues, had been dwindling away, but the other sources of revenue had been steadily increasing. The receipts for the ending June 30 were about $200,000 in excess of the estimates, and approximately a million and a half. At the same time the credit of the province was

THE CITY.

The incorporation is published in the Gazette of the 18th No. 2 Mining, Co., Limited, with a capital stock of $6,000, and a seat office at Kaslo.

Mr. JOSEPH MARTIN was yesterday presented to the Supreme court and took the usual oath which entitles him to practice as a member of the bar of this province.

D. R. KENNEDY, freeman on the Willapa, fell through one of the bunkers on the exhibition grounds yesterday morning. The wound was stitched up by Dr. Duncan and the patient is now doing well.

WORD comes from Kamloops of the sale of another mine. This is the Opekanos, which was purchased by T. O. Cotterill, of London, for $20,000; $500 down, $5,000 in three months and the balance in a year.

LOUIS CHEVRETON, a mining engineer from New York, has been in Victoria for the past few days, and intends sailing on the Willapa to-night for Alberni, where he will have a look at the mines. He is a member of the Pacific Northwest and from there make a trip to Texas.

NOTICE of incorporation is given in this week's British Columbia Gazette of the incorporation under the Farmers Institute and Co-operation Act, of the Vancouver Island Produce Society, with a capital stock of $10,000, and a seat office at Kaslo.

THE benches of the B. C. Law Society had a lengthy session yesterday, a great deal of the time being taken up in settling and revising regulations governing the conduct of the business of the society. The benches disbarred Mr. G. F. Cane, of Nanaimo, and disqualified Mr. S. H. Bowker, practicing as a solicitor. Under the act he has still the right of appeal to the judges of the Supreme court sitting en banc as visitors of the bar.

ACTING for a man named Heaney, Mr. A. J. Belyea is trying to obtain $200 that has been lying in the hands of the collector for the past fifteen years. Mr. Todd, the original plaintiff in the suit known as Lamester v. Bowker, which was a dispute over the ownership of the Victoria Driving Park, then Bowker Park, paid the money into court. He, dying, left his property to Mrs. Lamester, and during the course of the case Heaney obtained a judgment in favor of the plaintiff, Mrs. Lamester, and sent it here to be collected. Mr. Belyea is trying to secure the $200 as part payment of the claim.

AMONG the arrivals at the Dominion hotel yesterday were Mr. Phillip Hanna, a member of the Victoria Police Board, and Mr. S. J. Gray, of the Sydney Morning Herald, who are making a tour of the world in the interest of their respective papers. They left yesterday for the other side of the world, where they interviewed the Mikado, "rickshaw" through the country, and ate with chopsticks. They sailed the "Yellow Sea" for Singapore and Java, and saw India, junketed in a junk around the coast of Malaysia, ate curries in Penang, and generally had a gorgeous time.

THE GOOD TEMPLARS. Some of the Business Dealt With at the Grand Lodge Meeting.

The delegates to the Grand Lodge of Good Templars, which met at Wellington on Wednesday, returned home yesterday after a very pleasant, profitable and harmonious meeting.

The general judging of the dogs will be taken up by Mr. E. Davis, the expert assessor from Birkenhead, the benefits of which will be to the benefit of the dog owners. Seats have been provided in the judging room, and all who wish to witness this important work should be present. The dogs are to be judged in the order of their breed, and the opportunity to acquire dog wisdom or satisfy their idle curiosity as he may be. Score cards will be furnished all owners on the conclusion of the judging, showing the points in detail made by the judges, and the awards will be as valuable as those of any bench show in the land.

It has also decided that the mileage paid to delegates in attendance at Grand Lodge sessions will be in future a rate of five cents per mile for one way.

Petitions to the Dominion parliament are to be circulated in the subordinate lodges, praying that when the plebiscite vote is taken throughout the Dominion, the question of revenue be not coupled with the question of the prohibition of the liquor traffic.

The union of all temperance societies is aimed at, and a lengthy discussion was held as to the practicability of the union of prohibition forces.

The reading of the "International Good Templar" paper, after being recommended by the Grand Chief Templar, he said every member of the order should read it.

At the close of the session an excellent programme was provided by the members of the Wellington lodge for the entertainment of the Grand Lodge officers and members after their departure to another hall where a banquet was held and toasts drunk from the "cup which cheers but does not inebriate."

Mining Companies' office stationary a specialty at the Colonist office.

HOK TAW ARRAIGNED.

Prosecution Claim That He and Not Yee Gee Wrote Compromising Letters.

And That It is a Plot to Impugn the Collector Saunders' Character.

An offshoot of the Port Townsend onetime scandal opened in the Victoria police court yesterday before Magistrate Maere, when Hok Taw, alias Ah Tui of this city was charged "that he did between the first day of January and the first day of August of the present year, unlawfully forge the name of Yee Gee, and two letters dated December 16, 1896, and May 16, 1897."

The first of these letters was that of Ng Hok Hank, which was published in the Colonist yesterday morning, and if proved to be authentic, will show that a wholesale business has been done in assisting illegal Chinese immigration to the States. The second letter deals with the same subject, and if anything, goes further into details, showing the number of Chinese that have been assisted from Victoria. It reads as follows:

My Dear Friend,—Your favor of last week came duly to hand. The names of the five people and their photographs have been entrusted to the lawyer with the testimony for the five people I will send over to you in a few days. They have been in with. In about a week I will go in person to Collector Saunders' house and make the necessary arrangements with him, so that your five people can come over. I shall be interpreting in the customs house, so your people need not be anxious, but please let your minds rest easy. All you have to do is to open your mouth and I will know what to say to the collector, who will decide everything. Our company from the sixth month of last year has contracted to land thirty people from China per each boat, and there have been eighteen trips altogether. All of these landed safely and the collector has not complained. We have a party of Victoria we have brought in 380 people, all of whom landed safely and not one of them has been arrested. We are coming over to be sure not to say I (Yee Gee) am contracting to bring them over. The $700 for the five people kindly hand the cook, my nephew Yee Wo Chik, to bring over to be with Ng Hok Yin, of Yee Hong & Co. Immediately upon receipt I will ask Collector Saunders to let your men over.

Yee Gee, the man who claims his good name has been wrongfully used, is the Chinese interpreter at Port Townsend. He was examined at considerable length, and Mr. H. G. Hall, who appeared for the defence, subjected him, and the succeeding witnesses to a prolonged cross-examination.

During the taking of the evidence Hok Taw, the accused, sat smiling incredulously most of the time, occasionally shaking his head as much as to say that he wondered how anyone could believe he could be guilty.

Yee Gee denied stoutly that he had written the letters or signed his name to them. Then the "good luck" denial on the letter was not his. He denied having been in any way mixed up in smuggling his countrymen to the States; nor had he ever any dealings with Yee Wo Chik along those lines.

There was a little misunderstanding between Hok Taw and the collector, for when it was mentioned he said he called that as well as Ung Ching. He was one of three men to whom one of the letters was supposed to be addressed, but he said he did not know Yee Gee, never wrote to him, nor did he get letters from him.

Next came a white witness, Charles Wappenstein, a Pinkerton detective from Portland who had come here to hunt up Hok Taw. Hok Taw said at first that he knew nothing about them, and could not read anyway. Then the accused had admitted that he had done the letters on the Kingston wharf, where Wo Zick had dropped them. Taw next contradicted his former statement by admitting having read the letters and had sent them to "Rev." Mr. Gardner in California. What he did not have forwarded the letters to the persons to whom addressed, Taw had given an evasive answer—a grant and a shake of the head. This all happened two weeks ago and before Taw's arrest.

Detective Perdue practically corroborated Mr. Wappenstein. Taw had said Saunders was no friend of his, and he did not care whether he went to jail or not.

The next witness was a Chinaman who apparently desired to adapt himself to the ways of the country. His name was Lee outwardly. His name was See Dor, and from a fourteen years' residence in Victoria he was quite ready to swear in any way, and though he had not been the first day of August of the present year, unlawfully forge the name of Yee Gee, and two letters dated December 16, 1896, and May 16, 1897."

"Is that satisfactory to you, Mr. Hall?" asked the magistrate.

"I don't care whether he is sworn or not," replied the counsel for the defence smiling, the witness being one of those brought by the prosecution.

The witness accordingly remarked that to kiss the book he was quite agreeable.

"But the white people do not want him to kiss the book," remarked the Magistrate, "but to swear in any way he considers binding."

Well, then, See Dor would burn a paper, which he accordingly did, and as he apparently was indifferent as to what happened to him hereafter if he did not tell the truth he was reminded that if caught lying in this world he would spend a year in jail.

This witness proved a lengthy one. He had known the accused for four or five years, and had been in his partner. He produced some Chinese accounts which he said the prisoner had written to him, and on comparing these with the alleged letter he declared that the good luck seal was the same and some of the characters in his general letter appeared the same as some in one of the forged ones.

When it came down to cross-examination the witness said he could not read. He made some lengthy examinations of the genuine letter, and the forged one, and claimed to be able to make out that some of the characters were similar, as were also the impressions of the "good luck seal."

METHODISTS IN SESSION.

Yesterday's Meeting of the District Convention—Able Papers on Subjects of Interest to All.

Those who were privileged to be present in the Metropolitan Methodist church yesterday had the opportunity of hearing addresses upon some of the most interesting and important questions now engaging the attention of members of this wide-spread and influential denomination. The idea of holding conventions of the churches of Victoria district is a happy one, but the usefulness of such a plan was never more plainly demonstrated on this occasion. The discussions brought forth much that was of help and benefit to all present, and the interchange of ideas cannot fail to be productive of much good.

The convention was called to order by Rev. J. F. Betts, chairman of the district, and after the usual opening exercises had been gone through, the chairman briefly stated the origin and objects of the convention, and expressed the opinion that in inviting Rev. J. Crosby, the president of the conference, to take the chair of the Victoria district is a happy one, but the usefulness of such a plan was never more plainly demonstrated on this occasion.

The convention was called to order by Rev. J. F. Betts, chairman of the district, and after the usual opening exercises had been gone through, the chairman briefly stated the origin and objects of the convention, and expressed the opinion that in inviting Rev. J. Crosby, the president of the conference, to take the chair of the Victoria district is a happy one, but the usefulness of such a plan was never more plainly demonstrated on this occasion.

Rev. J. P. Bower, who was on the programme for the first paper, not having arrived, Rev. J. W. Winslow was called upon to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very strong case for literature, and being paid to this important subject in the discussion which followed, several thoughtful suggestions were made, with the exception of Rev. C. H. M. Sutherland, who had been invited to deliver the address upon the subject of "The importance of circulating good literature," in the course of which he presented a very