repugnance it excited in the house. His coolness, which was not maintained with entire success, does not imply courage so much as shamelessness and some consciousness of its utter inadequacy. His evasive quibbles to dispose of a chargel built upon a very broad induction may account for his laboured explanation of trifles and his resort to ill-timed recrimination. The House waited patiently for the frank treatment of the main question which never came. The chilling reception of his callous triviality was, only accentuated by the mechanical cheers of the Irish members.

It is understood Mr. Parnell is determined to press his smendment to the reply to the speech from the throne, arraigning the executive of Ireland for their administra-

The Daily News says the suspicions against the land league and some of its officials will be increased by the absence of any defence. Mr. Parnell yesterday said nothing to disprove the complicity in the outrages of some officials with whom he acted. It would have been well had Mr. Parnell shown the house that he discouraged the incendiary appeals constantly printed in the Irish World.

Parts, Feb. 24.-In the chamber leputies to-day M. Jolibois, Bonapartist, moved his interpellation touching the statement of M. Ferry. M. Jolibois asked whether the government's right of initiative was one above the law. M. Ferry said: "It is a legitimate right of defence, of which it is impossible to define the exact limits, but I advise the Bonapartists not to go too far to test our indulgence." M. Jolibois denied that the republic emanated from the national sovereignty, as it lacked a plebiscite. He moved "That the chamber desire the individual liberty of all citizens, without distinction, to be respected." The motion was rejected by 395 to 92. M. Ranc moved as an expression of confidence of the chamber, "That the government was sufficiently firm to insure respect for the republic." The motion was adopted by 368 to 93.

the report of the minister of war, justifying retirement.

The minister of war in his decree placing the Dukes D'Aumale, de Chartre, and D'Alencon on the retired list says the safety of the public required it. The public had become alive to the inconvenience of the presence in the army of officers belonging to former reigning families. The great principles of subordination and discipline might be weakened thereby.

The Temps, National, Paris Conservative, republican papers, deplore the fact that the government has been forced to issue decrees placing the princes on the retired list. They demand a revision of the law of 1834, in order that they may be reinstated.

She read an essay, in which she showed that the child's eye was confused with words which were pronounced so differently from the way they were spelled. Mrs. Arthurs said that the remedy for this was provided in the system which assigned but one function to each letter and which made each sound and symbol always agree. Without teaching children the technical terms for number, tense, etc., she told them that "here" meant in this place and "hear" was something done by the ears. Mr. Geo. McMurrich in supporting the vote of thanks which was tendered to Mrs. Arthurs said that the teachers of the junior forms should be acquainted with the phonic system.
