Ald Atkinson moved the adoption of the Bell Telephone Company's offer; Ald. Burns, in amendment, that the matter be deferred for another meeting on the ground that it was just possible the Bell might still further amend its offer; Ald. Orr, in amendment to the amendment, that the Bell offer be rejected. Ald. Burns' amendment was lost, as also Ald. Hall's and Orr's. Then Ald. Hewitt moved that the Bell's offer be accepted on the condition that in addition to its offer the company give five per cent. of its gross receipts to the city, the latter, however, not to accept the offer of free telephones. This was adopted on the following division:

WORMS AND EPITAPHS. What Vandal Hands Have Done To The family vault of the Boulton family is situ

The family vault of the Boulton family is situated on the edge of the Rosedale ravine, across from the eastern extremity of St. James' Cemetery. Whoever chose the site chose it well, for a more beautiful spot could not be imagined. But there is horror in the midst of all this, for the vault door is wide open and the battered coffins and scattered bones of generations of Boultons are exposed to view. It is a sight to make the blood run cold. Some ghoul has torn the lid from each coffin and turned it upside down and skulls are lying here and there. Some of the bones have been pitched out on the sward. The place shows that it has been neglected for years. There is a baby's coffin in the northeast corner which has been untouched, but all the other coffins have been broken and desecrated.
