

Business of the House

Having said that, perhaps the house leader might give some indication of what we could do tomorrow and the rest of the week, so that we can consider again to what extent and in what measure we can assist the government in getting on with its legislation.

Mr. Churchill: I would like to thank all hon. members of the house for their co-operation today. It has been a good day in regard to getting business through. I regret that the hon. member for Laurier had to introduce some remarks with regard to filibustering, which I think is unfair to hon. members coming from areas where coal is produced and who are interested in this particular problem.

I would like to call for tomorrow third reading of Bill C-3, an act to amend the Food and Drugs Act in the hope that there will not be an extended debate on the bill at that stage because I make the promise, all being well, that the special committee to consider and report upon various matters pertaining to drugs and insecticides will be called on Friday at the latest this week, the understanding being that during the course of the studies of that committee, things that pertain to Bill C-3 would be taken up by it.

The second item would be the resolution standing in the name of the Minister of National Revenue dealing with the Atlantic development board. The third item will be the resolution in the name of the Minister of Trade and Commerce dealing with the National Productivity Council Act. The fourth item will be committee stage of the bill which we have just completed on second reading, relating to coal production.

If the house moves as quickly tomorrow as it did today then we would consider as No. 5 Bill C-83, an act respecting industrial change and manpower adjustment. No. 6 would be Bill C-70, to provide for the safety of persons employed in federal works. If those are all completed I would then call items standing in the name of the Minister of Justice which have been called before. That, I think, would consume the time of the house for Tuesday and Wednesday.

I have already given notice that we expect to get on with the national economic development board measure on Thursday.

Mr. Douglas: May I direct a question to the house leader. It might save some debate on the drug act if it were possible for us to have a copy of the terms of reference for the special committee.

Mr. Churchill: It was introduced today.

It being five minutes after ten o'clock the house adjourned, without question put, pursuant to standing order.
