Wife Tells of Her First Meeting With White and the Shadew GIVES $32,000,000 it Cast Over Her Life and That of Young Thaw - Scenes and Incidents, Pathetic and Tragic, Graphically Described.

ACCUSED SITS IN TEARS AS EVIDENCE IS GIVEN

New York, Feb. 7.-Evelyn Nesbi Thaw told her story to-day. To save the life of her husband, charged with murder, she bared to the world the mermost secrets of her soul-a portrayal for which a sanctuary were a more fitting place than the crowded, raping court room. It was the same tory she told Harry Thaw in Paris in 903 when he had asked her to become who felt there was an insurmountable barrier to her ever becoming the bride of the man she loved.

In the big witness chair she appeared but a slip of a girl and she told the litiful story of her eventful young life in a frank, girlish way. When tears came unbidden to her big brown eyes and slowly trickled their way down scarlet cheeks, she strove in vain to keep them back. Tho the lump in her throat at times seemed about to choke her, she uttered the words from trembing lips and by a marvelous display of courage which took her willingly to her staggering ordeal, she shook off a depression which once threatened to become an absolute collapse.

As the young wife narrated her girlhord and told of the early struggles of herself and her mother to keep body and soul together of how poverty stood ever at the door, and of how finally she was able to earn a livelihood by posing for photographers and artists, she had the murmured sympathy of the throng which filled every avaliable space in the big court room.

Then came the relation of the wreck of that girlhood at 16 years of age, it was the story of her meeting with Stanford White, the story of the sumptuous studio apartment, the dingy exhaust of the survivor with the story of the sumptuous studio apartment, the dingy exhaust of the survivor with the story of the sumptuous studio apartment, the dingy exhaust of the survivor with the story of the sumptuous studio apartment, the dingy exhaust of the survivor with the story of the sumptuous studio apartment, the dingy exhaust of the same work.

was the story of her meeting with Stanford White, the story of the sumptuous studio apartment, the dingy exterior of which did not even suggest the luxurious furnishings within of a velvet covered swing in which a girl could fly upward until her slippered toes went thru the paper of a Japaneses parasol swung from the celling; of a glass of champagne, of black, whirling sensations and of a bedroom with mirrored walls. She told all the story—the dramatic story so long awaited by the public.

"Don't scream so, it is all over. It is all right."

"And this was Starford White?"

The question came from Delphin M. Delmas, now conducting the defence of Harry Thaw.

"Yes, sir."

The stiliness of the crowd then,

Of her early life, she related how her mother went from Pittsburg to Phila-delphia to obtain assistance and of how she and her brother Howard—the pro-ther who has been in court often, but ther who has been in court often, but who has not once gone near his sister—were placed on a train by friends and sent to their mother. She recalled that the two little travelers had trouble with the conductor, who wanted to put their cat out of the car. "When she came for me in the hansom," said the witness, "I' remember hoping we were going to the Waldorf.
I had heard so much about it and wanted so to go there. But the hansom stopped in front of a dingy looking

The Trap.

"He was big and fat and ugly. I remember his meeting us at the head of three flights of stairs," she continued. Then he gave me presents and my mother let me go to other parties. Then he said my mother should visit some friends in Pittsburg. She said she could not leave me. He said it would be all right that he would look after me. Finally she went. Then came an invitation to a party, but no one else was there—just two. They all seemed to have turned us down, he said. Then when we had dined, I wanted to go home, he said we hadn't seen all the apartments and "went to the bedroom with the mirrors all over the walls."

Thus the story ran, with just here and there an interruption by Mr. Del-mas to advise the girl to fix the dates of the various happenings and also to tell just what she had told Harry Thaw when he asked her to become his wife. It was owing to the fact that she had "told everything to Harry" that she was permitted under the rules of law to give her story to

It is the largest single benefaction for such purposes ever known, Mr. Rockefeller having previously given the board $11,000,000 for the same work.

His contributions now amount, there-fore to $120,000,000 and and the contributions of the bill to amend the Conciliation Act by making it an offence, subject to a fine of $100 for anyone not a citizen of Canada and a British subject, to interfere in a strike in Canada, and that no one not a citizen of Canada, and a British subject, should be appointed to a board of conciliation.

In doing so, he said, he had no objection to laboring men forming themselves into unions or to surlking if they felt they were being unfairly treated, but he objected to Americans being allowed to come in and encourage men to strike and organize disturbances.

Employers were forbidden by the Allen Labor Act from bringing in men to take the places of strikers. It was only fair, therefore, that workmen should be forbidden to bring in agitaters to organize strikes. The Hamilton Street Railway strike and the Lethbridge coal strike furnished good reasons for the passing of this or a similar bill.

There was no objection to American inancial aid being sent to Canada to aid Canadians in labor disputes, but agitators should be kept out.

The C. P. R. recently called for tenders for repairing a steamer on the Pacific. A Victoria firm gor the contract and a Seattle firm tendered untract and a Seattle firm tendered us successfully.
