MILLS CURTAILING

Montreal, Jan. 25—Cotton textile mills of Canada are experiencing a greater slackness in business than met with in the past ten years. Many of them are running on half time. The cause of this is attributed to the high price of raw cotton, which has forced manufactured prices up to a point where the trade will not buy more than immediate requirements. From the beginning of the war until the middle of last year, the mills were operating well up to capacity.

Halifax, Jan. 25—After a 22 days passage during which mountainous seas were encountered, the Anglo-American oil tanker Suwanne, bound from Great Britain to New York, arrived in port today with bunkers empty, and in need of repais.

On January 16, when about half way across, the Suwanne was washed by a tremendous sea which swept all in its path, smashing rails and decks, sweeping over the funnel and nearly banking the ship's fires. Capt. Taylon who had a narrow escape from being swept overboard from the bridge, sustained a broken leg, while Engineer Clark has a dislocated shoulder and a broken arm.
