FACT TRADE WITH CANADA

U.S. Hears Warning Re New Tariff Legislation.

Canada Basis of States' Foreign Trade, Says Senator Reed—Outlet for Western Wheat Fields.

Washington, Aug. 3.—(By Canadian Press)—Apprehension of serious curtailment of trade between the United States and Canada, to the serious detriment of both countries, is being more and more voiced in Washington as the tariff bill advances toward enactment. It is an interesting fact that Canada is coming to Washington expressing concern and at the same time similar concern is expressed by many in congress. The warning which Senator Nelson of Minnesota voiced in the senate the other day that this is a critical time in tariff making and the tariff cannot be rammed along old lines is expressive of that a growing number of congressmen and officials believe. This is not saying that enactment of high rates will be prevented but it is indicative of the fact that the new bill, once it is enacted, is exposed to the prospect of an unfavorable reaction of public sentiment. Senator Reed of Missouri, prominent in the democratic side of the senate, has just had published in the Congressional Record a speech he made some time ago in which, among other things, he urged the importance of fostering trade with Canada. In connection with it, he put into the Record tables showing the growth of trade between the two countries. Senator Reed said: Canada Best Customer. "Mr. President, I wish to dwell for a moment upon the Canadian situation, because in my opinion it lies at the very basis of our foreign trade. Canada is today and has for years been the best customer of the United States. "It will be found that if we go to 1913 as the year of normality, we exported to Canada in that year—in round numbers—products worth $400,000,000, and imported products worth $142,000,000. The balance of trade in our favor was $258,000,000. In 1919 we exported to Canada $734,000,000 worth of our products; we imported $494,000,000 worth of products; and we had a balance of trade in our favor of $240,000,000. "Now, let us stop a moment and ask why we should not trade with Canada. There is nothing between Canada and the United States but a red line drawn on the map. The soil of North Dakota and of all our Northwestern States runs directly on into Canada. They have the same kind of soils there, speaking broadly, that we have in Northern United States. They have a population that is more like the population of the United States than any other people of any land whatsoever. One may visit in Canada and be there a month and scarcely realize that he is outside the borders of the United States. The Canadians pay a little higher farm wages than we do in the United States. That is due to the fact that in a new country wages are higher than in a country thoroughly developed. The Canadians use the same kind of farm implements, and they buy them nearly all from us. They have the same language, the same school system, the same religion, the same hopes, the same code of morals, and the same high ambition and desire to succeed. They are so much like the people of the United States that I would they were a part of the United States, although I do not expect to see them so.

"If it be asked why Canadian wheat comes to Minneapolis and other great centers of the United States, I answer by asking, why does wheat go from North Dakota to Minneapolis. Both questions are answered by the map which I have had suspended from the wall of the Chamber. If Senators will look on that map and observe the heavy blue lines, they will see that the great trunk lines of railroad run from North Dakota down to Minneapolis. When a farmer wants to get his wheat to a mill, he puts it on a car that is going to the mill, and that is all there is to it. "However, those same lines of railroad cross the imaginary line between North Dakota and Canada and run into and tap the great wheat fields of Canada. The Canadian farmer, who is just across the line, puts his wheat in the same kind of cars on the same tracks that the North Dakota farmer does and sends it to Minneapolis, because it is where the cars run. The wheat seeks its natural outlet. Mr. President, it would be just as sensible to bar North Dakota wheat from Minneapolis as to bar Canadian wheat.

"Some Canadian wheat, going over another great trunk line of road, reaches the Lake at Fort William and there, following the shortest line of travel, it is hauled over the Great Lakes and is milled in the United States, because it is a little shorter and a little better route to a market where the mill is located which is to turn it into flour than it is to carry the wheat clear across the Dominion of Canada to the eastern coast. "Mr. President, when Canadian wheat, following the natural line of travel comes into the United States and is milled here, does it affect the American market to any material extent? The answer to that is that when Canadian wheat reaches the United States it finds a market which is already oversupplied. That oversupplied market, whether the Canadian wheat comes or not, must relieve itself by shipments abroad. A large percentage of Canadian wheat must go from Canada, ultimately to be consumed in Great Britain and other European countries. Likewise there goes from American ports a steady stream of American wheat, which must be consumed in the identical countries where the Canadian wheat must find its ultimate markets. There the two wheats meet, they are sold in competition, and the prices in the markets of Liverpool and Berlin fix the prices of the Canadian wheat and of the American wheat."
