

ANDIT'S GUNS GET HIS SON IN TROUBLE

Jesse James' Pistols Figure in Episode in Kansas City.

Kansas City, Mo., May 19.—(United News.)—The same pair of wicked looking pistols that dangled menacingly from the belt of Jesse James, in the turbulent frontier days, slipped from their holsters here long enough to cause the bandit's son, also named Jesse, a lot of trouble.

Young Jesse Carleiss. It was the careless way in which the famous outlaw carried his "irons" that earned for him the respect of enemies. And, strangely enough, it was the lack of caution his son used that brought him into the tolls of the law.

Jesse James, Jr., who practices law in Kansas City, wrote a book about his dad and therein the bandit was pictured as a man who wanted to surrender, but feared foul play at the hands of those administering justice.

And after seeing that the book gained wide circulation, the son put the pistols back in their holsters and placed them with other remembrances of his father.

The world knew that Jesse James had been slain by one of the Ford brothers, both of whom he believed to be true friends, and the attorney felt confident that the James name was cleared of blemish.

And from that day until this the pistols have been idle, so James says.

Then came an accident. A car in which James and friends were riding was struck by another automobile driven by a son of Dr. Sheldon, one of James' best friends.

It was necessary to take Sheldon to a hospital. There a bulge in James' pockets was noticed. An investigation disclosed that his companions also were armed.

Has Jumpy Nerves.

Highly nervous and confused, James explained to officers that he had a commission to patrol the road, where several hold-ups have been reported. He could not satisfactorily explain, however, who issued his commission and was about to be charged with carrying concealed weapons when Dr. Sheldon intervened, and suggested James go to a sanitarium. A search disclosed that he carried his dad's weapons.

So the son of the fearless frontier bandit, who carried his dad's guns for a night, will be treated for "jumpy" nerves, physicians said.

ARTILLERY RIFLE CLUB.

The Artillery Rifle Club officially opened their season's activities last Saturday by holding a shoot on the local range. Captain Morgan reported that the initial event was a success and that there was a large turnout. Some of the scoring was not high, due to a strong wind prevailing, but from all indications the Club will turn out some good marksmen. New targets were in use Saturday and are smaller than the old ones.

Captain Morgan desires all those who desire to join this club to be at the Armories next Friday evening at 8 o'clock to draw their rifles and membership cards. There will be a regular spoon match next Saturday afternoon.

The reason so much scandal is made is because there are so many eager to carry it.

The Efficient Mr. Biffkins

(Chapter One)

The new partner wanted to get settled quickly and yet he wondered just how he could go about purchasing a suitable home in the right district—without delay.

As usual, someone suggested that he call in Mr. Biffkins from the Accounting Department. Mr. Biffkins always knew what to do.

After the partner had explained his requirements, Biffkins said: "The Squirrel Hill District will suit you to a T. We'll put an ad in The Times-Star this very afternoon as The Times-Star is the leading advertising medium of St. John. In the meantime, I'll read the advertisements published today and between the two methods we are practically certain of finding something for you."

As usual, Mr. Biffkins was right. Incidentally, the new partner made a mental note that Biffkins well deserved his title of "the efficient."
