The ceremony was performed by the Rev. P. G. Wrightman of the Malden Baptist church. Only immediate friends were present. The bride, who was unattended, looked charming in a dress of white and blue silk organdie with trimmings to match, and carried a bouquet of pink and white roses. ## A BIG DAY.

Three Cases of Aggravated Assault Dealt With This Morning.

The magistrate had his hands full for a couple of hours this morning, but in spite of the efforts put forth very little business was completed. Among the prisoners was the inevitable Dave Hennessy, who appeared to answer the charge of striking Roland Dixon on the jaw with a bottle last night. The magistrate addressed a few pointed remarks to Hennessy and requested him not to bother pleading to the charge.

Dixon said that he had been standing on the corner of Mill and North streets when Hennessy came along. The latter spoke, and as Dixon turned away he was struck with a bottle on the side of the face. One tooth was loosened and his face was badly cut. Hennessy was committed for trial and will appear in the county court on Tuesday next.

John McDonald was another prisoner on the charge of assault. The complainant in this case was Thomas J. Collins, and the affair took place in the Sheffield street house. Collins blamed McDonald and McDonald's maid Collins was responsible for the whole affair.

An inveterate talker in the person of Sophie Whalen, colored, gave her version, which was in McDonald's favor, and the case was dismissed on the ground that Collins could get some other witnesses. No one was hurt very much.

The third assault case was that in which Phil Bushman and Jimmy Burns were charged with beating Alex. Diggs in Blood Alley a few weeks ago. Diggs appeared swathed in bandages, and told the story of how he had been knocked down and kicked so that he was unconscious until the next day. The prisoners pleaded not guilty and were remanded until Dr. Lunney, who attended Diggs in the hospital, could appear to prove the extent of the injuries.

A charge against Kane & McGrath for a violation of the regulations regarding the killing of cattle, which has been dragging along since the middle of April, was again postponed.

James Byron and Margaret Whalen were each fined eight dollars and costs, and Fred McInnis and Frank Hopper four dollars or ten days for drunkenness.

FROST SMOTE THEM.
One day last week Adam Shand, following the example his respected but somewhat weak minded namesake of green apple fame, worked hard in setting out from his greenhouse a thousand carnations, calculated to supply the demand for some time. On that day it looked like rain and the prospects were good for the welfare of the plants, but for once the weather man was right and the appearance of the day was deceitful. The evening turned cool, later on it became chilly, and as the hours moved on the mercury kept a falling and a falling until through the night there was quite a heavy frost. The carnations were frozen. But there are lots more where they came from.

A WAYWARD GIRL.
Last evening the police raided another house, but no arrests were made. The visit was for the purpose of persuading an eighteen year old girl to return to her home. This girl's mother reported to the police that her daughter was unmanageable, and Sergt. Campbell and Officer Sullivan went to the house in Harrington's alley, off Brussels street, where she was to be found.

With her was another girl, and the visit of the police caused many tears. The girl was sent to her home.

FOR MOOSEPATH PARK.
A special meeting of the directors of the Agricultural Society will be held this week to consider what will be best to do with Moosepath Trotting Park. A number of city gentlemen who own good horses are considering the advisability of purchasing the park for their private use. Their idea is to have a good driveway where they can let their fast ones open up without any of the risk of danger to the public on the marsh or any other public highway.

FALE HAS DROPPED GREEK.
No Longer a Compulsory Study at that University.

(Worcester Spy.)
One of the chief events of the week in the field of American education was the dropping of Greek as a compulsory study at Yale University. This important change was effected when on Monday the corporation approved the recommendation of the teaching faculty to extend the elective system to the Freshman year. Thus Yale falls more completely into line with a modern educational movement in which Harvard has been an important force.

Eight courses in 1904 will be open to Yale freshmen from which they must elect five. Furthermore, Greek will not be required for admission after the next school year. It is provided under the new arrangement that three of the five courses elected shall be in continuation of three of the five studies—Greek, Latin, English, mathematics or a modern language—pursued in a preparatory school.

Year by year the disposition on the part of educators to make Greek a necessary part of the educational scheme becomes less. The change gives more opportunity for the study of modern languages, which has received additional impetus from the wider relations the United States has attained. Experts in matters of education seem to be pretty well agreed as to the wisdom of yielding to popular demands, and their position is probably correct. The study of Greek will continue to appeal to many and will be the more delightful to them because they can pursue it in company with persons of their own tastes and feelings. The old-fashioned Greek class, in which two-thirds of the students hated the subject thoroughly, was by no means satisfactory, either to professors or to those really interested. Generally speaking, it may be said that the modern system of electives tends to group in the classroom those of similar tastes and interests and for that reason should make college life more smoothly both for teachers and students.

NOBODY KILLED.
MADRID, May 19.—The report published by a news agency in a despatch from here yesterday that twelve persons were killed and fifty were injured during a bull fight Sunday, at Algeciras, was greatly exaggerated. Part of the amphitheatre of Los Barrios, near Algeciras, collapsed, and some persons were injured but no people were killed and no women from children were gored by bulls, as announced in the despatches referred to.

ALL NEW GOODS!

Shoppers take no interest in a store where goods and methods are out-of-date. The call is for newness—the freshness and sparkle that come from a running stream.

We talk to you of bargains, and of values that are special, but newness marks everything. The goods are not sold at little prices because old or shop-worn, or out-of-fashion. The more we sell the oftener we have to buy, and the constant outgo of goods—necessitates a daily incoming—which keeps the currents fresh and sparkling.

Fast as these special lots are sold, others will take their place.
